Vernacular Architecture Material Culture:

Vernacular Architecture Henry Glassie, 2000-12-22 Based on thirty five years of fieldwork Glassie's Vernacular Architecture synthesizes a career of concern with traditional building He articulates the key principles of architectural analysis and then centering his argument in the United States but drawing comparative examples from many locations in Europe and Asia he shows how architecture can be a prime resource for the one who would write a democratic and comprehensive history

Material Culture Henry Glassie, 1999 Material culture records human intrusion in the environment It is the way we imagine a distinction between nature and culture and then rebuild nature to our own desire by shaping reshaping and arranging things during our lifetimes We live in material culture depend upon it take it for granted and realize through it our grandest aspirations

Tilley, 2006-01-26 Provides a critical survey of the theories concepts intellectual debates substantive domains and traditions of study characterizing the analysis of things This handbook charts an interdisciplinary field of studies that makes a fundamental contribution to an understanding of what it means to be human

Domestic Spaces of Affection Wanessa Cardoso de Sousa, 2021 This thesis explores the role of vernacular architecture material culture and the establishment of spatial memories in the context of domestic environments By critically analyzing the case of two Brazilian families one living in Brazil and one living in Canada I argue that Brazilian domestic vernacular architecture objects used in interior decoration and memories related to household spaces can influence affection for a place They perform as symbols of identity and belonging demonstrating that the sense of affection can be associated with people objects and buildings The houses examined in this thesis have different backgrounds the first family lives in northeastern Brazil in a home they started to build in the 1970s The second family immigrated to Greater Montreal in the 2010s where they moved to a house they did not construct Through oral interviews I investigated the collection of emplaced memories in specific domestic environments the entwined sense of identity and space and how people create their domestic settings through spatial practices In addition to interviews the participants drew memory maps and shared vernacular photographs and personal objects that illustrate their memories related to the house This methodology helped me in analyzing examples of spatial practice concerning both self built domestic vernacular architecture and found domestic spaces occupied and reshaped by the family besides tracing the affective spatial relationships in each case

Material Culture, Artifact System, Rituals, and Symbolic Meanings in the Vernacular Architecture of Masulih, Iran Ehsan Daneshyar, 2015 The main purpose of this study is to illustrate the interconnections between the local culture and vernacular architecture of the Iranian town of Masulih My research will explore the connections between the rituals artifacts and beliefs of the inhabitants of Masulih and their distinctive vernacular architecture in order to demonstrate that the landscape of Masulih is a powerful symbolic ritual space that represents their identity The cultural production of Masulih's inhabitants forms an essential part of their identity It includes the settlement pattern architecture and material culture such as blacksmithing shoemaking baking carpentry and textiles I argue that in order to understand the cultural specificities of place one needs to focus holistically on cultural phenomena My approach therefore requires an examination of the everyday activities of people their rituals beliefs artifacts and the built environment
