

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

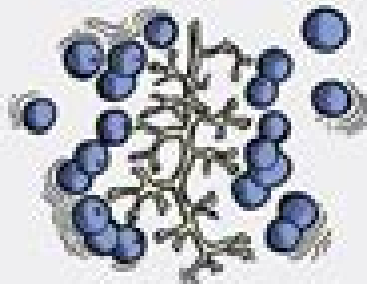

The easiest way to learn how to make wine at home

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) period is the best time to harvest grapes. It's during this time that the grapes are at their peak. The weather is usually warm and dry, which is ideal for growing grapes.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and then crushed. Some winemakers remove the seeds (pips) before crushing. The result is a thick, dark red juice. Some winemakers add sugar at this stage to make the wine sweeter.

Clarification

Clarification is the process of removing any unwanted particles from the wine. This is done by adding a small amount of a substance called fining. Some winemakers use egg whites for this purpose.

Press

After the fermentation process, the wine is pressed. This is done by using a press to squeeze the juice out of the grapes. The juice is then collected in a container.

Fermentation

Grapes are left to ferment in a barrel or tank. The yeast (which is added in the next step) converts the sugar in the grapes into alcohol. This process can take several weeks.

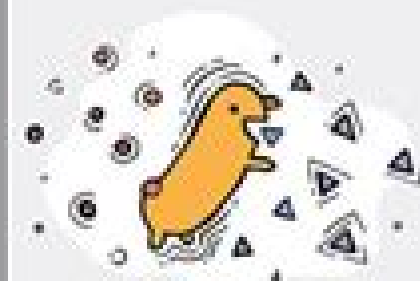

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the wine to start the fermentation process. The yeast converts the sugar in the grapes into alcohol. This process can take several weeks.

Bottling

Bottling is the final step in the wine-making process. The wine is poured into bottles and sealed. This process can take several weeks.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a process where the lactic acid in the wine is converted into alcohol. This process can take several weeks.

Aging

The wine is left to age in a barrel or tank. This process can take several weeks.

Blending

The wine is blended with other wines to create a unique flavor. This process can take several weeks.

Bottle aging

The wine is left to age in a bottle. This process can take several weeks.

How Mockingbirds Are Donald Bahr,2011-06-24 The power of mockingbirds and the enduring significance of indigenous ceremonial speeches are deftly revealed in this brilliant analysis of ritual orations created and delivered by the O odham people also known as the Pima Papago Making their homes along the Akimel rivers and across the arid expanses and mountains of the desert of southern Arizona and northern Sonora the O odham people traditionally lived in small villages with scattered brush walled round houses Public ceremonies involved many villages and centered around small brush walled rainhouses One hundred years ago two very different versions of a speech delivered during rain ceremonies were heard at these rainhouses The Pimas Akimel O odham told of nearly silent and stately events the calming of a heaving earth the building of a house on the stilled land the breathing out of smoke and the coming of gentle rain In marked contrast the Papagos Tohono O odham told of how raucous drunken people caused clouds to rise and explode with rain like vomiting drunks Both stories featured mockingbirds and both involved the coming of rain Today the gentler Pima version is extinct while the wilder Papago story endures Why Drawing upon a rich reservoir of O odham oral traditions and ceremonial performances a meticulous deciphering of particular texts and an insightful assessment of the impact of Christianity upon the O odham people Donald Bahr offers a brilliant analysis of why some indigenous stories cease to be relevant and told The clues lie in the very different trajectories of the Pima and Papago communities in the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries trajectories resulting in part with how Christianity fared in the respective communities
