CONSUMER INFORMATION

The Department of Consumer Affairs has received information that certain models of 1986 Volvo cars and trucks may have been sold with a defective fuel system component. This component may cause a fuel leak, which could result in a fire. Volvo is currently investigating this problem and will notify owners of affected vehicles. In the meantime, owners of these vehicles should be alert for a fuel leak and should stop the engine if a leak is detected. Volvo will pay the cost of repairs for affected vehicles.
