Samantha Van Schalkwyk, 2016-01-14 Questions that concern gender and violence against women have been placed firmly on the agenda of interdisciplinary research within the humanities in recent years Gender based violence against women has increased exponentially in South Africa and in other countries on the African continent particularly those with a history of political conflict Researchers who explore such gender issues have paid limited attention to the intersection between the social contexts of the researched the positionality of the researcher and the research product This book brings together an interdisciplinary group of scholars and scholar activists to explore new terrains of knowledge production interrogating the connection between the intellectual project of this kind of research and the process of its production Some chapters draw on theoretical insights and provide new ways of thinking about the kinds of questions that should be asked when conducting research in the field of gender Other authors grapple with an acknowledgement of their multiple social positions in the world the ways in which they experience these ever shifting boundaries and how this influences their theoretical and practical work Some contributions go further discussing the ways in which the researcher and the researched influence each other and the link between feminist research and social change These chapters contribute to an understanding of how social movement activism can be developed Overall this book represents an important combination of scholarly insights and provides multiple reflections about practical aspects of conducting gender research in the African context The work of the contributors to the volume is situated within a post structural feminist agenda and collectively the chapters link scholarship and activism in a way that pursues a social change agenda in research on gender and gender based violence I Ask for Justice David

Carey, Jr., 2013-10-01 This study of the Guatemalan legal system during the regimes of two of Latin America s most repressive dictators reveals the surprising extent to which Maya women used the courts to air their grievances and defend their human rights Winner Bryce Wood Book Award Latin American Studies Association 2015 Given Guatemala s record of human rights abuses its legal system has often been portrayed as illegitimate and anemic I Ask for Justice challenges that perception by demonstrating that even though the legal system was not always just rural Guatemalans considered it a legitimate arbiter of their grievances and an important tool for advancing their agendas As both a mirror and an instrument of the state the judicial system simultaneously illuminates the limits of state rule and the state s ability to co opt Guatemalans by hearing their voices in court Against the backdrop of two of Latin America s most oppressive regimes the dictatorships of Manuel Estrada Cabrera 1898 1920 and General Jorge Ubico 1931 1944 David Carey Jr explores the ways in which indigenous people women and the poor used Guatemala s legal system to manipulate the boundaries between legality and criminality Using court records that are surprisingly rich in Maya women s voices he analyzes how bootleggers cross dressers and other litigants crafted their narratives to defend their human rights Revealing how nuances of power gender ethnicity class and morality were constructed and contested this history of crime and criminality demonstrates how Maya men and women attempted to improve their socioeconomic positions and to press for their rights with strategies that ranged from the pursuit of illicit activities to the deployment of the legal system Narrative Analysis Catherine Kohler

Until recently boys and men provided the template by which problem behaviors in girls and women were measured. With the shift to studying female development and adjustment through female perspectives comes a need for knowledge of trajectories of at-risk girls' behavior as they mature. Girls at Risk: Swedish Longitudinal Research on Adjustment fills this gap accessibly and compassionately. Its lifespan approach relates the pathologies of adolescence to later outcomes as girls grow up to have relationships, raise families and take on adult roles in society. Coverage is balanced between internalizing behaviors traditionally considered to be more common among females and externalizing ones more common among males. The book's detailed review of findings includes several major longitudinal studies of normative and clinical populations and the possibility of early maturation as a risk factor for pathology is discussed in depth. Contributors not only emphasize what works in intervention and prevention but also identify emerging issues in assessment and treatment. An especially powerful concluding chapter raises serious questions about how individuals in the helping professions perceive their mission and their clients. Although the studies are from one country, Sweden, the situations and their potential for successful intervention transcend national boundaries including adolescent and adult implications of pubertal timing, eating disorders and self-esteem, prevention of depressive symptoms, understanding violence in girls with substance problems, lifespan continuity in female aggression and violence, a life course perspective in girls' criminality. With insights beyond the beaten path, Girls at Risk provides a wealth of information for researchers, clinicians and related professionals and graduate students in child and school psychology, psychiatry, education, social work, psychotherapy and counseling and public health.
