Womans Wartime Journal Plantation Shermans:

A Woman's Wartime Journal Dolly Sumner Lunt, 2012-12-01 Dolly Sumner Lunt begins her diary A Woman's Wartime Journal published in 1918 by recalling her anxiety about the approach of General Sherman's Union army on January 1, 1864. While she worries about the arrival of Sherman's troops and their habit of pillaging and burning everything in their path, she records stories of visits by local raiders posing as U.S. soldiers and the sleepless nights she has spent watching fires on the horizon. Despite Lunt's efforts to hide her valuable possessions which include sending her mules into the woods, dividing her stores of meat among the slaves, and burying the silver, the passing Union troops raid her house and plantation and take her slaves with them. They also set fire to cotton bales in her barn, but the blaze burns out before spreading, largely sparing Lunt's property. The widespread destruction suffered by neighboring plantations. In her last entries dated December 1865, Lunt writes optimistically about the recovery of her farm, her new sharecropping system, and the first cheerful Christmas in years. A Woman's Wartime Journal D.S. A Woman's Wartime Journal Dolly Sumner Lunt, 2015-07-19 Excerpt from A Woman's Wartime Journal: An Account of the Passage Over a Georgia Plantation of Sherman's Army on the March to the Sea as Recorded in the Diary of Dolly Sumner Lunt Mrs. Thomas Burge. Though Southern rural life has necessarily changed since the Civil War, I doubt that there is in the entire South a place where it has changed less than on the Burge Plantation near Covington, Georgia. And I do not know in the whole country a place that I should rather see again in springtime than the Georgia springtime. When the air is like a tonic vapor distilled from the earth from pine trees, tulip trees, balm of Gilead trees, or ham trees as the negroes call them, blossoming Judas trees, Georgia crab apple, dogwood, pink, and white peach blossom, wisteria. Dolly Sumner Lunt Lewis Burge,1918 A Woman's Wartime Journal Dolly Sumner Lunt,1918 A Woman's Wartime Journal Dolly Lunt,2012-11-20 AN ACCOUNT OF THE PASSAGE OVER A GEORGIA PLANTATION OF SHERMAN S ARMY ON THE MARCH TO THE SEA Though Southern rural life has necessarily changed since the Civil War I doubt that there is in the entire South a place where it has changed less than on the Burge Plantation near Covington Georgia And I do not know in the whole country a place that I should rather see again in springtime the Georgia springtime when the air is like a tonic vapor distilled from the earth from pine trees tulip trees balm of Gilead trees or bam trees as the negroes call them blossoming Judas trees Georgia crab apple dogwood pink and white peach blossom wistaria sweet shrub dog violets pansy violets Cherokee roses wild honeysuckle azalia and the evanescent green of new treetops all carried in solution in the sunlight It is indicative of the fidelity of the plantation to its old traditions that though more than threescore springs have come and gone since Sherman and his army crossed the red cottonfields surrounding the plantation house and though the Burge family name died out many years ago with Mrs Thomas Burge a portion of whose wartime journal makes up the body of this book the place continues to be known by her name and her husband s as it was when they resided there before the Civil War Some of the negroes mentioned in the journal still live in cabins on the plantation and almost all the younger generation are the children or grandchildren of Mrs Burge s former slaves Mrs Burge was born September 29 1817 in Bowdoinham Maine That she was brought up in New England in the heart of the abolitionist movement and that she was a relative of Charles Sumner consistent foe of the South lends peculiar interest to the sentiments on slavery expressed in her journal As a young woman she moved from Maine to Georgia where her married sister was already settled While teaching school in Covington she met Thomas Burge a plantation owner and gentleman of the Old South and presently married him When some years later Mr Burge died Mrs Burge was left on the plantation with her little daughter Sarah the Sadai of the journal and her slaves numbering about one hundred Less than three years after she was widowed the Civil War broke out and in 1864 this cultivated and charming woman saw Sherman's army pass across her fields on the March to the Sea. At the time of my visit to the plantation the world was aghast over the German invasion of Belgium the horrors of which had but recently been fully revealed and confirmed. What then I began to wonder must life have been in this part of Georgia when Sherman's men came by? What must it have been to the woman and the little girl living on these acres in this very house? Whereas Sherman's March through Georgia was an invasion of what was then the enemy's country for the purpose of breaking the back of that enemy and thus terminating the war nevertheless military necessity was the excuse in either case for a campaign of deliberate destruction which in the State of Georgia was measured by Sherman himself at one hundred millions. When therefore I learned that Mrs. Burge had kept a journal in which were related her experiences throughout this period I became eager to see it and I am sure the reader will agree that I did him a good turn when after perusing the journal I begged its author's granddaughters Mrs. M. J. Morehouse of Evanston, Ills. and Mrs. Louis Bolton of Detroit, Mich. my hostesses at the plantation that they permit it to be published. Their consent having graciously been given I can only wish that the reader might sit as I did perusing the story in the very house in the very room in which it was written. I wish he might turn the yellow pages with me and read for himself of events which seem somehow more vivid for the fact that the ink is faded brown with time.

We Are What We Remember Laura Mattoon D'Amore, Jeffrey Meriwether, 2013-01-16 Commemorative practices are revised and rebuilt based on the spirit of the time in which they are re-created. Historians sometimes imagine that commemoration captures history but actually commemoration creates new narratives about history that allow people to interact with the past in a way that they find meaningful. As our social values change race gender religion sexuality class our commemorations do too. We Are What We Remember: The American Past Through Commemoration analyzes current trends in the study of historical memory that are particularly relevant to our own present: our biases, our politics, our contextual moment and strive to name forgotten, overlooked and denied pasts in traditional histories. Race, gender and sexuality for example raise questions about our most treasured myths: where were the slaves at Jamestowne? How do women or lesbians protect and preserve their own histories when no one else wants to write them? Our current social climate allows us to question authority and especially the authoritative definitions of nation, patriotism and heroism and belonging. How do we uncommemorate things that were miscommemorated in the past? How do we repair the damage done by past commemorations? The chapters in this book contributed by eighteen emerging and established scholars examine these modern questions that entirely reimagine the landscape of commemoration as it has been practiced and studied before.

General Sherman and the Georgia Belles Cathy J. Kaemmerlen, 2006-10-18 The courage and sacrifices of the Southern women who stood in the way of Sherman's March to the Sea from Atlanta to Savannah during the Civil War. When General Sherman led 60,000 soldiers on a sixty-mile wide path of destruction through Georgia the purpose was to frighten civilians into abandoning the Confederate cause. Most Georgia women were left to face the enemy alone; their men were off fighting or hiding for fear of being killed or taken as prisoners of war But these steel magnolias were well prepared to protect all that was rightfully theirs Cathy Kaemmerlen a renowned storyteller and historical interpreter provides a colorful collection of tales of exceptional Georgia women who made great sacrifices in an effort to save their families and homes From the innocent diary of a 10 year old girl to the words of a woman who risks everything to see her husband one last time Kaemmerlen exposes the grit and gumption of these remarkable Southern women in inspiring and entertaining fashion
