

1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the issue is a lack of communication between the project manager and the team. This can be caused by a variety of factors, including a lack of clear roles and responsibilities, a lack of open communication, and a lack of trust between the project manager and the team.

2. The second step is to analyze the problem. This involves identifying the root cause of the problem and determining the impact of the problem on the project. In this case, the root cause of the problem is a lack of clear roles and responsibilities. The impact of the problem is that the project is delayed and the team is frustrated.

3. The third step is to develop a solution. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to resolve the problem. In this case, the solution is to establish clear roles and responsibilities for each team member. This can be done by creating a project charter that outlines the roles and responsibilities of each team member.

4. The fourth step is to implement the solution. This involves putting the solution into action. In this case, the solution is implemented by creating a project charter that outlines the roles and responsibilities of each team member. The project charter is then distributed to all team members and they are asked to sign it.

5. The fifth step is to monitor the solution. This involves tracking the progress of the project and ensuring that the solution is being implemented correctly. In this case, the solution is monitored by tracking the progress of the project and ensuring that the roles and responsibilities of each team member are being followed.

6. The sixth step is to evaluate the solution. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the solution and determining if it has resolved the problem. In this case, the solution is evaluated by assessing the progress of the project and determining if the roles and responsibilities of each team member have been followed.

7. The seventh step is to document the solution. This involves creating a record of the solution and the steps that were taken to resolve the problem. In this case, the solution is documented by creating a project charter that outlines the roles and responsibilities of each team member.

8. The eighth step is to communicate the solution. This involves sharing the solution with the team and ensuring that they understand the solution. In this case, the solution is communicated by sharing the project charter with the team and ensuring that they understand the roles and responsibilities of each team member.

9. The ninth step is to review the solution. This involves reviewing the solution and determining if it has resolved the problem. In this case, the solution is reviewed by assessing the progress of the project and determining if the roles and responsibilities of each team member have been followed.

10. The tenth step is to close the project. This involves finalizing the project and ensuring that all tasks have been completed. In this case, the project is closed by finalizing the project and ensuring that all tasks have been completed.

11. The eleventh step is to evaluate the project. This involves assessing the overall performance of the project and determining if it was successful. In this case, the project is evaluated by assessing the overall performance of the project and determining if it was successful.

12. The twelfth step is to share the results. This involves sharing the results of the project with the team and ensuring that they understand the results. In this case, the results are shared by sharing the project charter with the team and ensuring that they understand the roles and responsibilities of each team member.

13. The thirteenth step is to celebrate the success. This involves celebrating the success of the project and ensuring that the team is motivated. In this case, the success is celebrated by sharing the project charter with the team and ensuring that they understand the roles and responsibilities of each team member.
