Rehabilitative Work in Criminal Justice Pamela Ugwu-dike, Hannah Graham, Fergus McNeill, Peter Raynor, Faye S.

Taxman, Chris Trotter, 2019-09-12 All the world's criminal justice systems need to undertake direct work with people who have come into their care or are under their supervision as a result of criminal offences. Typically, this is organized in penal and correctional services in custody in prisons or in the community supervised by services such as probation. Bringing together international experts, this book is the go-to source for students, researchers, and practitioners in criminal justice looking for a comprehensive and authoritative summary of available knowledge in the field. Covering a variety of contexts, settings, needs, and approaches, and drawing on theory and practice, this Companion brings together over 90 entries offering readers concise and definitive overviews of a range of key contemporary issues on working with offenders. The book is split into thematic sections and includes coverage of theories and models for working with offenders, policy contexts of offender supervision and rehabilitation, direct work with offenders, control, surveillance, and practice, resettlement, application to specific groups including female offenders, young offenders, families, and ethnic minorities, application to specific needs and contexts such as substance misuse, mental health, violence, and risk assessment, practitioner and offender perspectives, the development of an evidence base. This book is an essential and flexible resource for researchers and practitioners alike and is an authoritative guide for students taking courses on working with offenders, criminal justice policy, probation, prisons, penology, and community corrections.

Emotional Literacy in Criminal Justice C. Knight, 2014-02-04 Emotions remain largely invisible in the management of criminal justice practice. This book seeks to uncover some of the underground emotional work of practitioners and make visible the impact of both positive and negative emotions which play a crucial role in practitioner-offender relationships. Exploring how practitioners understand, regulate, and work with emotion, Knight argues that the soft skills of emotion are more likely to achieve motivation and change in offenders than the hard skills of punishment, monitoring, and surveillance. The book examines some of the gendered implications of this practice and develops an argument for the explicit building of emotional resources within organizations to sustain the development, enhancement, and support of emotional literacy in the workforce. Using practice examples, Knight reveals how practitioners can benefit from having an understanding of their own emotions and how these can impact on their practice. This unique and accessible book will be a valuable resource to practitioners across the criminal justice sector, including probation officers, youth justice workers, police, and prison officers, social workers, policymakers, and managers, as well as scholars working within criminology, criminal justice, and probation.
