Traditional Japanese Poetry ,1991 This anthology brings together in convenient form a rich selection of Japanese poetry in traditional genres dating back from the earliest times to the twentieth century With more than 1 100 poems it is the most varied and comprehensive selection of traditional Japanese poetry now available in English Ezra Pound called poetry the most concentrated form of verbal expression and the great poets of Japan wrote poems as charged and compressed as poems can be The Japanese language with its few consonates and even fewer vowels did not lend itself to expansive forms making small seem better and perhaps more powerful There is also the historical context in which Japanese poetry developed the highly refined society of the early courts of Nara and Kyoto In this setting poetry came to be used as much for communication between lovers and friends as for artistic expression and a tradition of cryptic statement evolved with notes passed from sleeve to sleeve or conundrums exchanged furtively in the night Add to this the high sense of decorum that dominated court society for centuries and you have the conditions that led to the development of the classical uta also referred to as tanka or waka the thrity one syllable form that acts as the foundation for virtually all poetry written in Japanese between 850 and 1900 In choosing poems the compiler has given priority to authors and works gnerally acknowledged as of great artistic and or historical importance by Japanese scholars For this reason major poets such as Kakinomoto no Hitomaro Izumi Shikibu Saigyō and Matsuo Bashō are particularly important collections such as Man yōshū Kokinshū and Shin kokinshū In addtion the volume also contains samplings from genres such as the poetic diary linked verse Chinese forms and comic verse An Anthology of Traditional Japanese Poetry Competitions Setsuko Ito, 1991

Utamakura, Allusion, and Intertextuality in Traditional Japanese Poetry Edward Kamens, Howard I. Kamens, 1997-01-01 Kamens focuses especially on one figure the buried tree which refers to fossilized wood associated in particular with an utamakura site the Natori River and is mentioned in poems that first appear in anthologies in the early tenth century The figure surfaces again at many points in the history of traditional Japanese poetry as do the buried trees themselves in the shallow waters that otherwise conceal them After explaining and discussing the literary history of the concept of utamakura Kamens traces the allusive and intertextual development of the figure of the buried tree and the use of the place name Natorigawa in waka poetry through the late nineteenth century He investigates the relationship between utamakura and the collecting of fetishes and curios associated with utamakura sites by waka connoisseurs
