Three Famines Starvation And Politics:

Three Famines Thomas Keneally, 2012-09-04 Through the lens of three of the most devastating food crises in modern history the Gorta Mor of British ruled Ireland the great famine of British ruled Bengal in 1943 and the string of famines that plagued Ethiopia during the 1970s and 1980s Booker Prize winning author Thomas Keneally vividly evokes the terrible cost of mass starvation at the level of the individual who starves and the nation that watches. Famine is widely misunderstood as a completely natural catastrophe. Keneally recounts that while the triggers crop pestilence and drought are natural the political and ideological choices that prolong famine are man made. Government neglect and individual venality not food shortages are historically the causes of sustained widespread hunger. In Ireland British authorities ignored the existence of a food crisis while the famished fed on diseased cattle and human remains. In Bengal where over four million starved to death Field Marshal Archibald Wavell's reports of people dying in Calcutta's streets and demands for relief resulted in little more than a mocking cable from Winston Churchill asking why if food was so scarce hadn't Gandhi died yet. In Ethiopia Mengistu Haile Mariam arranged for 400 000 bottles of whisky to ship to Addis Ababa from Britain to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the revolution that put him in power while one person died every twenty minutes in Kibera. These three famines are stark examples of how throughout history racial preconceptions administrative neglect and incompetence have been more lethal than the initiating blights or crop failures. Keneally's startling narrative history is a sobering warning to the authorities in charge of mercy in our time to stop making choices that feed famine instead of the starving.

Three Famines Tom Keneally, Thomas Keneally, 2011 A standout history told with Tom Keneally panache. This is the story of three great famines. The first is the Gorta Mor the great hunger of Ireland which began in 1846 and whose end date is a matter of debate. The second is the less well known but more deadly famine that struck Bengal in 1943. The third is the Ethiopian famine which first sprung up in lethal form in the 1970s under Emperor Haile Selassie and then again under the brutal dictator Mengistu in the 1980s. Keneally himself visited Eritrea in 1984 to see the effects of this grave event. In those who suffered these famines in those who denied their suffering in those who propounded theories to excuse it in those who against the wishes of each government told the world what was happening and in those who tried to relieve it there is a remarkable continuity of impulse and experience and dilemma. Though these famines are diverse they are in many ways as similar as if they were related by DNA or a malignant force of fallibility. Tom Keneally shares these three shocking histories with his customary penetrating wisdom and he presents a controversial theory in his utterly compelling narrative in all three famines: ideology mindsets of governments racial preconceptions and administrative incompetence were ultimately more lethal than the initiating blights the loss of potatoes or rice or the grain named teff.

The Politics of Famine in European History and Memory Ingrid de Zwarte, Miguel Ángel del Arco Blanco, 2025-05-15 This is the first book to bring together groundbreaking scholarship focusing on the various ways in which famines result from political decision making and how the threat occurrence relief or memory of famine is instrumentalized as a political and military tool Contributions to this volume reveal the complexities variations and motivations behind the instrumentalization of famine by political actors and regimes and how the politics of perpetrating hunger and the politics of relieving it have often been intertwined They also address how famine legacies have been subsequently politicized in public debates educational practices and popular media and how these socially and politically constructed memories and myths in turn have shaped broader narratives about hunger and humanitarianism both in history and today The Politics of Famine in European History and Memory provides a crucial resource for scholars and students from all disciplines interested in the study of famines as well as those interested in the history of war and troubled pasts more generally

The Oxford Handbook of Agricultural History Jeannie M. Whayne, 2024 Agricultural history has enjoyed a rebirth in recent years in part because the agricultural enterprise promotes economic and cultural connections in an era that has become ever more globally focused but also because of agriculture's potential to lead to conflicts over precious resources. The Oxford Handbook of Agricultural History reflects this rebirth and examines the wide reaching implications of agricultural issues featuring essays that touch on the green revolution the development of the Atlantic slave plantation the agricultural impact of the American Civil War the rise of scientific and corporate agriculture and modern exploitation of agricultural labor.

Food Fight Chris Herlinger, Paul Jeffrey, 2015-09 Third book in a humanitarian trilogy that includes Where Mercy Fails Darfur's Struggle to Survive and Rubble Nation Haiti's Pain Haiti's Promise Combines dramatic photojournalism and compelling narrative to give a voice and a face to the global issue of hunger Includes authors interview and discussion guide for group use This dramatic work of photojournalism and powerful storytelling describes how the battle to end hunger is being won bit by bit in places like Africa Latin America the Caribbean and the United States through the compassionate work of grass roots communities of faith involved in anti hunger efforts For individuals study groups and participants in local and nation wide anti hunger programs

Reporting Disasters Suzanne Franks, 2013-08-28 The media reporting of the Ethiopian Famine in 1984-5 was an iconic news event. It is widely believed to have had an unprecedented impact challenging perceptions of Africa and mobilising public opinion and philanthropic action in a dramatic new way. The contemporary international configuration of aid media pressure and official policy is still directly affected and sometimes distorted by what was as this narrative shows also an inaccurate and misleading story. In popular memory the reporting of the Ethiopian famine and the resulting humanitarian intervention were a great success. Yet alternative interpretations give a radically different picture of misleading journalism and an aid effort which did more harm than good. Using privileged access to BBC and Government archives Reporting Disasters examines and reveals the internal factors which drove BBC news and offers a rare case study of how the media can affect public opinion and policymaking. It constructs the process that accounts for the immensity of the news event following the response at the heart of government to the pressure of public opinion. And it shows that while the reporting and the altruistic festival that it produced triggered remarkable and identifiable changes the ongoing impact was not what the conventional account claims it to have been.
