

User interface evaluation

- ❖ Some evaluation of a user interface design should be carried out to assess its suitability.
- ❖ Full scale evaluation is very expensive and impractical for most systems.
- ❖ Ideally, an interface should be evaluated against a usability specification. However, it is rare for such specifications to be produced.

A Task Model-based Approach for Design and Evaluation of Innovative User Interfaces Carmen Santoro,2005 Nowadays the advent of the wireless Internet and the rapid expanding of novel technologies on the mass market have represented a tremendous stimulus for pushing the development of interactive systems able to encompass support for a larger and larger variety of users tasks devices and contexts In this thesis we present the benefits of using task models in the various steps of the lifecycle of an interactive application Indeed we show how they can play an important role in the requirements elicitation phase for example by requiring precise definition of temporal relationships between the different activities that should be performed so avoiding any ambiguities Furthermore we describe how task models may be exploited in software development beyond early analysis as they can provide valuable information for the design of interactive applications through a number of criteria specifying how to use the data contained in task models to drive the design of the user interface Additionally we analyse how they can be used for verification purposes in order to check some properties of the modelled system in combination with other models so improving the level of confidence towards the system which can be relevant especially in safety critical contexts Lastly we show the benefits that can be gained from using task models in the usability evaluation phase through a systematic analysis of the impact that the deviations from an expected task plan could have on the quality of the overall system
