Key National Education Indicators National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Board on Testing and Assessment, Steering Committee on Workshop on Key National Education Indicators, 2012-09-10 The education system in the United States is continually challenged to adapt and improve in part because its mission has become far more ambitious than it once was At the turn of the 20th century less than one tenth of students enrolled were expected to graduate from high school Today most people expect schools to prepare all students to succeed in postsecondary education and to prosper in a complex fast changing global economy Goals have broadened to include not only rigorous benchmarks in core academic subjects but also technological literacy and the subtler capacities known as 21st century skills To identify the most important measures for education and other issues and provide quality data on them to the American people Congress authorized the creation of a Key National Indicators System KNIS This system will be a single Web based information source designed to help policy makers and the public better assess the position and progress of the nation across a wide range of areas. Identifying the right set of indicators for each area is not a small challenge. To serve their purpose of providing objective information that can encourage improvement and innovation, the indicators need to be valid and reliable, but they also need to capture the report committee's aspirations for education. This report describes a workshop planned under the aegis of the Board on Testing and Assessment and the Committee on National Statistics of the National Research Council. Key National Education Indicators is a summary of the meeting of a group with extensive experience in research, public policy, and practice. The goal of the workshop was not to make a final selection of indicators but to take an important first step by clearly identifying the parameters of the challenge.

Indicators for Monitoring Undergraduate STEM Education National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Science Education, Committee on Developing Indicators for Undergraduate STEM Education, 2018-03-08. Science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) professionals generate a stream of scientific discoveries and technological innovations that fuel job creation and national economic growth. Ensuring a robust supply of these professionals is critical for sustaining growth and creating jobs growth at a time of intense global competition. Undergraduate STEM education prepares the STEM professionals of today and those of tomorrow while also helping all students develop knowledge and skills they can draw on in a variety of occupations and as individual citizens. However, many capable students intending to major in STEM later switch to another field or drop out of higher education altogether, partly because of documented weaknesses in STEM teaching, learning, and student supports. Improving undergraduate STEM education to address these weaknesses is a national imperative. Many initiatives are now underway to improve the quality of undergraduate STEM teaching and learning. Some focus on the national level; others involve multi-institution collaborations and others take place on individual campuses. At present, however, policymakers and the public do not know whether these various initiatives are accomplishing their goals and leading to nationwide improvement in undergraduate STEM education. Indicators for Monitoring Undergraduate STEM Education outlines a framework and a set of indicators that document the status and quality of undergraduate STEM education at the national level over multiple years. It also indicates areas where additional research is needed in order to develop appropriate measures. This publication will be valuable to government agencies that make investments in higher education institutions, higher education private funders of higher education programs, and industry stakeholders. It will also be of interest to researchers who study higher education.

Monitoring Educational Equity National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Board on Testing and Assessment, Committee on Developing Indicators of Educational Equity, 2019-10-30. Disparities in educational attainment among population groups have characterized the United States throughout its history. Education is sometimes characterized as the great equalizer, but to date the country has not found ways to successfully address the adverse effects of socioeconomic circumstances prejudice and discrimination that suppress performance for some groups To ensure that the pursuit of equity encompasses both the goals to which the nation aspires for its children and the mechanisms to attain those goals a revised set of equity indicators is needed Measures of educational equity often fail to account for the impact of the circumstances in which students live on their academic engagement academic progress and educational attainment Some of the contextual factors that bear on learning include food and housing insecurity exposure to violence unsafe neighborhoods adverse childhood experiences and exposure to environmental toxins Consequently it is difficult to identify when intervention is necessary and how it should function A revised set of equity indicators should highlight disparities provide a way to explore potential causes and point toward possible improvements Monitoring Educational Equity proposes a system of indicators of educational equity and presents recommendations for implementation This report also serves as a framework to help policy makers better understand and combat inequity in the United States education system Disparities in educational opportunities reinforce and often amplify disparities in outcomes throughout people s lives Thus it is critical to ensure that all students receive comprehensive supports that level the playing field in order to improve the well being of underrepresented individuals and the nation Resources in Education ,2000-10 An Education Research Primer Patricia A.
