Unearthing Conflict Corporate Mining Activism And Expertise In Peru:

Unearthing Conflict Fabiana Li, 2015-04-08 In Unearthing Conflict Fabiana Li analyzes the aggressive expansion and modernization of mining in Peru since the 1990s to tease out the dynamics of mining based protests. Issues of water scarcity and pollution, the loss of farmland and the degradation of sacred land are especially contentious. She traces the emergence of the conflicts by discussing the smelter town of La Oroya where people have lived with toxic emissions for almost a century before focusing her analysis on the relatively new Yanacocha gold mega mine. Debates about what kinds of knowledge count as legitimate, Li argues, lie at the core of activist and corporate mining campaigns. Li pushes against the concept of equivalence or methods with which to quantify and compare things such as pollution to explain how opposing groups interpret environmental regulations, assess a project's potential impacts and negotiate monetary compensation for damages. This politics of equivalence is central to these mining controversies and Li uncovers the mechanisms through which competing parties create knowledge, assign value, arrive at contrasting definitions of pollution and construct the Peruvian mountains as spaces under constant negotiation.

Indigenous Life Projects and Extractivism Cecilie Vindal Ødegaard, Juan Javier Rivera Andía, 2018-10-02 Exploring indigenous life projects in encounters with extractivism, the present open access volume discusses how current turbulences actualise questions of indigeneity, difference and ontological dynamics in the Andes and Amazonia. While studies of extractivism in South America often focus on wider national and international politics, this contribution instead provides ethnographic explorations of indigenous politics, perspectives and worlds, revealing loss and suffering as well as creative strategies to mediate the extralocal. Seeking to avoid conceptual imperialism or the imposition of exogenous categories, the chapters are grounded in the respective authors' long standing field research. The authors examine the reactions from resistance to accommodation, consequences from anticipation to rubble and materials from fossil fuel to water, diversely related to extractivism in rural and urban settings. How can Amerindian strategies to preserve localised communities in extractivist contexts contribute to ways of thinking otherwise?

Resisting Extractivism Michael Wilson Becerril, 2021-02-15 ACRL's Choice Outstanding Academic Title of 2021 Peru is classified as one of the deadliest countries in the world for environmental defenders where activists face many forms of violence. Through an ethnographic and systematic comparison of four gold mining conflicts in Peru, Resisting Extractivism presents a vivid account of subtle and routine forms of violence, analyzing how meaning making practices render certain types of damage and suffering noticeable while occluding others. The book thus builds a theory of violence from the ground up, how it is framed, how it impacts people's lived experiences and how it can be confronted. By excavating how the everyday interactions that underlie conflicts are discursively concealed and highlighted, this study assists in the prevention and transformation of violence over resource extraction in Latin America. The book draws on a controlled qualitative comparison of four case studies, extensive ethnographic research conducted over fourteen months of fieldwork, analysis of over nine hundred archives and documents.

and unprecedented access to more than 250 semi structured interviews with key actors across industry the state civil society and the media Michael Wilson Becerril identifies traces and compares these dynamics to explain how similar cases can lead to contrasting outcomes insights that may be usefully applied in other contexts to save lives and build better futures

Law in Conflict Angela Lindt, 2023-12-04 Peru's industrial mining sector is highly conflictual and characterized by social disputes Many of these conflicts are fought not only in politics but also in the courts as activists attempt to hold corporate and state actors liable for human rights violations At the same time they face an increasing criminalization of their protests Law is thus both an emancipatory tool for activists to access justice and an instrument for political and economic elites to prevent social change Based on ethnographic field work Angela Lindt sheds light on various mining disputes in Cajamarca and Piura and examines the role of law in resolving these conflicts Socially Just Mining Jordan Aitken, Rita

Armstrong, Vicki Bilro, Andy Fourie, Kylie Macpherson, 2022-05-31 In this book we consider ways in which mining companies do and can should respect the human rights of communities affected by mining operations We examine what can and should means and to whom in a variety of mostly Peruvian contexts and how engineers engage in normative practices that may interfere with the communities best interests We hope to raise awareness of the complexity of issues at stake and begin the necessary process of critique of self and of the industry in which an engineer chooses to work This book aims to alert engineering students to the price paid not only by vulnerable communities but also by the natural environment when mining companies engage in irresponsible and often illegal mining practices If mining is to be in our future and if we are to have a future which is sustainable engineering students must learn to mine and support mining in new ways ways which are fairer more equitable and cleaner than today Socially Just Mining: Rethoric Or Reality? Local Experiences of Mining in Peru Gerardo Castillo Guzmán, 2020-02-05 This book uses a multimethod approach to examine local experience of contemporary mining development in the Peruvian Andes creating an understanding of the transformations that rural societies experience in this context Mining is a major component of economic growth in many resource endowed countries whilst also causing mixed social cultural and environmental effects Most current literature on contemporary mining in Peru is largely focussed on conflict however in this text the author takes a differing approach by examining the experiences of families in the vicinity of Rio Tinto's La Granja exploration copper project Northern Peru an area with great significance due to the mining investment and development which has taken place over the past 25 years The book first provides a critical discussion about production of space theories and debates on spatial mobility highlighting their relevance to understanding large scale mining developments especially in the Peruvian Andes The following chapters analyze spatial transformations mining development has prompted focusing on four axes access to space production mobility and representations of space A comprehensive narrative is constructed drawing on diverse voices and perspectives including those of family heads and their partners local leaders company employees and social scientists The book concludes by discussing how the findings challenge some of the current accounts of the social effects of mining development on rural communities and pose significant implications for sustainable development programs and place based practices By taking an interdisciplinary approach this book will appeal to a wide audience including geographers social anthropologists and social scientists interested in the social effects of mining as well as researchers interested in current Latin American Studies and Rural Development

Mining Controversies in Peru Athena Laubacher, Corinne A. Pernet, 2013 The ongoing conflict surrounding the large scale mining project Minas Conga in Cajamarca Peru can be considered an emblematic case for the consequences of changing realities generated by the country's neoliberal economic order Fear of the project's impact on local communities water supplies and a general weariness with mining companies taking the riches out of their earth while not perceiving any tangible benefits has triggered a conflict that has lasted over a year and a half involving a multitude of actors and interests Communities living close to mining sites in Peru are growing increasingly weary of multinationals turning immense profits while their livelihoods are turned upside down Governments at national regional and local levels receive vast amounts of mining revenues but those revenues have not translated into sustainable development as they are invested poorly or not at all Since the year 2000 Peru has experienced a period of immense economic growth made possible by the country's neoliberal economic model since the 1990s and based largely on the production and export of mining products This increase in mining activity throughout the country however has come at the expense of the environment local communities labor etc and it clashes among other things with indigenous rights and the conservation of Peru's biological diversity Notwithstanding the negative effects the continuous conflictive situation has helped bring about impulses to important reforms This thesis discusses the governance processes underlying the widespread mining controversies in the country and what they reveal about nature protection and social implications in Peru The Peruvian Mining Industry Elizabeth Dore, 1988-10-17 A Thoroughly Modern Resource Curse? the New Natural Resource Policy Agenda and the Mining Revival in Peru Javier Arellano-Yanguas, 2008 Mines and Mining in Peru Peru Ministerio De Relaciones Exteriores, 2018-11-13 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public To ensure a quality reading experience this work has been proofread and republished using a format that seamlessly blends the original graphical elements with text in an easy to read typeface We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant Beyond Conflict and Conciliation , 2015 Mining, Environments and People Diana Raquel Vela Almeida, 2017 This thesis intervenes in an effort to contribute to the literature on extractivism in Latin America Two case studies were selected the Yanacocha mine in Peru and the Cordillera del Condor region in Ecuador The aim from these studies is to illustrate the change in social and environmental struggles over the evolution of mining projects according to the development stage of the mine The first analysis of this thesis details a conceptual framework derived from the work of ecological economist Nicholas Georgescu Roegen This framework is used to understand mining as an economic productive process with entropic consequences This analysis identifies the possibility to define biophysical limits to mining extraction understood as the threshold to which ore extraction resource use and waste generation are socially permitted As decision making regarding mining is not straightforward the role of deliberative participation is emphasized in order to clearly define tradeoffs between biophysical requirements environmental constraints and social conditions Using the approach above the socio ecological impacts of mining are examined specifically in the hydrological system surrounding the Yanacocha mine in Cajamarca Peru This case study illustrates the impacts on the quantity of water in the Mashcon catchment one of the most affected areas by the Yanacocha mine Concerns relate to changes in water flows lowering of water tables and a decline of base flows These disturbances indicate deficiencies in the distribution of water between small farmers and the urban population and highlight a critical concern in a region where water is considered a scarce resource Results of the hydrological analysis reveal important lessons over the future of water planning in Cajamarca and the contradictions between the distribution of water and the allocation of its use rights among users The second half of this research focuses attention on the Cordillera del Condor Southern Amazon of Ecuador where three large scale mining projects are located Two studies analyze the socio political definitions and interests that determine the institutional and territorial changes accommodating political mining interests Firstly a grounded theory analysis was conducted in order to examine the transformations of socio spatial relations in the Cordillera del Condor These transformations explain how mining is currently co producing territory in distinctive ways through the integration of five territorial partitions institutional hierarchies governance frameworks social imaginaries politico cultural identities and productive transformations These changes reflect the aim of the Ecuadorian state to centralize extractive decisions and build state power in contradiction to the nation s constitutional intentions to build a plurinational state A final empirical study assesses the positions of key stakeholders regarding the articulation of mining discourses in Ecuador Results highlight four distinct mining related discourses 1 responsible extractivism 2 local self determination 3 national economic development and 4 local economic development The analysis of nuanced positions within these discourses permits the understanding of discursive articulation of how power is leveraged between the geographical scale at which conflict is experienced and the scale at which decisions are politically defined The discussion reveals the role of politics of scale in conceptualizing mining discourses across geographical scales and how it is used to simultaneously structure disassemble and restructure power relations among actors and scales Finally this analysis provides insights for conflict resolution potential on the political complexities of mining conflicts
