

MOA Subtensions

The VMR-2 reticle is based on minute-of-angle (MOA) subtensions. MOA measurements are based on degrees and minutes: 360 degrees in a circle, 60 minutes in a degree for a total of 21,600 minutes. These angular measurements are used to estimate range and correct for bullet trajectory drop in riflescopes. 1 MOA will correspond to 1.05 inches for each 100 yards or 29.1 mm for each 100 meters.

Second Focal Plane Reticles

Second focal plane (SFP) reticles are located near the scope's eyepiece behind the image erecting and magnifying lenses. This style of reticle does not visually change in size when you change the magnification. The advantage of an SFP reticle is that it always maintains the same ideally-sized appearance. When shooting with this SFP scope, be aware that the listed reticle subtensions used for estimating range, holdover, and wind drift correction are only accurate at the highest magnification.

VMR-2 Subtensions

Ranging

MOA measurements are very effective for ranging using a simple formula. To use this formula, the shooter needs to know the size of the target, or nearby object, in inches.

MOA Ranging Formula

$$\frac{\text{Target Size (Inches)} \times 95.5}{\text{Measured MOA}} = \text{Range (Yards)}$$

$$\frac{\text{Target Size (CM)} \times 34.38}{\text{Measured MOA}} = \text{Range (Meters)}$$

Using either the vertical or horizontal MOA scale, place the reticle on a target of known dimensions and read the number of MOAs spanned. You will obtain maximum accuracy in ranging by calculating exact MOA measurements. MOAs should be estimated in 1/2s if possible.

Accurate measuring will depend on a very steady hold. The rifle should be solidly braced using a rest, bipod or sling when measuring. Once you have an accurate MOA reading, use the formula to calculate the distance.

Example

Ranging a target stand that is six feet (72 inches) tall at 12 MOA to get 573 yards.

$$\frac{72 \times 95.5}{12 \text{ MOA}} = 573 \text{ Yards}$$
