

Army Officer Evaluation Report (OER's)

As officers in the U.S. Army, military residents are subject to the same evaluation ratings and periodic reports that every officer receives. In the Army's eyes, the most important periodic contribution to an officer's record is the official rating and description provided by the Officer Evaluation Report (OER). For your purposes, the OER will be used to determine fitness for promotion, assignments, and selection for military training to include fellowships.

In an officer's rating chain, he or she is first evaluated by a rater. In this residency program the rater will be a faculty member chosen by the program director and department chief who will be responsible for evaluating all members of a residency year group with input from the individual advisors. It is the rater who will describe in the OER the resident's overall performance and potential for promotion. In our residency program, there is no intermediate rater, so the next and final person in the rating chain is the senior rater. It is the senior rater's job to review the rater's comments and to provide important career influencing input to the evaluation, to include checking a "rating block".

There have been some significant alterations to the OER that were last made in 1997. The major change that will affect you involves senior rater accountability. To decrease the tendency for rating inflation, the senior rater now has significantly limited ability to place individuals in the "above center of mass" rating. Having a rating in this category is not necessary for promotion, and in fact the majority of residents will actually fall into the "center of mass" category.

About a month before the end of the academic year (usually in May), the administrative support person from your residency year group should be forwarding you an OER support form for you to fill out and forward to your rater. The three sections that make up this form are as follows:

1. Duties and Responsibilities (Part IV a.). This is the section of the OER support form that defines your position. Since it is not you who defines your position, your supervisors based on the standard duty requirements of your specific house officer position should already complete this position. The rest of the support form is derived from this duty description.
2. Major Performance Objectives (Part IV b.). Ideally this portion is supposed to be filled out by both the rater and the rated officer within 30 days of the start of the rating period, and then adjusted throughout the rating period as opportunities arise. In our program, the quarterly evaluation meeting with your advisor functions in a similar manner to help you and your advisor chart your progress towards meeting your goals and objectives. State in this section what you expect to accomplish (or were expected to accomplish if you are filling this out retrospectively) during that rating period. The more specific you can be, the better!
3. Significant Contribution (Part IV c.). This section of the support form is similar to a brag sheet that states specifically what you the rated officer have accomplished over the rating period. This section in fact gives the rater and
