Writing Owen Jones, 2023-11-25 More people are writing now than at any time in the history of civilisation This is mainly down to education and more free time The generation of the parents of the Baby Boomers was the first generation of mass readers certainly in the West and probably globally Their parents could read usually but had no tradition of reading books Instead they read mostly newspapers Their children had a better education and picked up the reading habit from their parents They were also encouraged to read books at school The first generation where this happened Their children the post World War II Baby Boomers continued the progression and became avid readers In those days not so long ago say between seventy and thirty years ago people wrote letters by hand It was a long but very pleasant personal experience Then the home computer email and the Internet began to spread among the masses and pen and ink gradually became replaced with message boards posting to forums and email Before this point writing had been a special event for most people thank you letters postcards birthday cards and the odd personal letter home or to a friend The home computer made it easy to dash off a quick note to someone It took far less time to write and deliver or have delivered by the post office Suddenly everyone began writing and posting to family friends strangers and even enemies A barrier had been lifted barriers of time and formality perhaps A high percentage of those Boomers compared with other generations have gone on to write some kind of book or ebook So the Boomers are the first generation of working class writers and their parents were the first working class generation of readers The generations after the Boomers have never lived without the Internet and use it even more confidently than the Boomers used a pen This is why there have never been so many writers or typists in the history of mankind Writing skills are more important now than ever before because of the proliferation of writers and therefore readers Now is not the time to slack to lower standards In fact quite the opposite Hence this booklet

Reading and Writing the Electronic Book Catherine C. Marshall, 2010

Developments over the last 20 years have fueled considerable speculation about the future of the book and of reading itself This book begins with a gloss over the history of electronic books including the social and technical forces that have shaped their development The focus then shifts to reading and how we interact with what we read basic issues such as legibility annotation and navigation are examined as aspects of reading that eBooks inherit from their print legacy Because reading is fundamentally communicative I also take a closer look at the sociality of reading how we read in a group and how we share what we read Studies of reading and eBook use are integrated throughout the book but Chapter 5 goes meta to explore how a researcher might go about designing his or her own reading related studies No book about eBooks is complete without an explicit discussion of content preparation i e how the electronic book is written Hence Chapter 6 delves into the underlying representation of eBooks and efforts to create and apply markup standards to them This chapter also examines how print genres have made the journey to digital and how some emerging digital genres might be realized as eBooks Finally Chapter 7 discusses some beyond the book functionality how can eBook platforms be transformed into portable personal libraries In the end my hope is that by the time the reader reaches the end of this book he or she will feel equipped to perform the next set of studies write the next set of articles invent new eBook functionality or simply engage in a heated argument with the stranger in seat 17C about the future of reading Table of Contents Preface Figure Credits Introduction Reading Interaction Reading as a Social Activity Studying Reading Beyond the Book References Author Biography
