Coastal producer communities like mangroves salt marsh grass seagrass beds and seaweeds absorb atmospheric carbon dioxide during the process of photosynthesis This carbon known as the blue carbon is thus associated with the marine and estuarine ecosystems However a number of gaps in our scientific knowledge on blue carbon domain still exist Molluscs coral reefs phytoplankton which are amongst the important storehouses of carbon have not been addressed Very few scientific studies on the carbon stored in these valuable natural vaults have been performed and no data bank is available on their carbon sequestering capacity on global basis The methodologies for assessing blue carbon stock also need further standardization so that credit from blue carbon reservoir is accepted by the International bodies in the form of a concrete policy It is a matter of great appreciation that Conservation International CI the International Union for Conservation of Natural Resources IUCN and the Intergovernmental Oceanic Commission IOC of UNESCO is collaborating with governments research institutions non governmental and international organizations and communities around the world to develop management approaches financial incentives and policy mechanisms for ensuring conservation and restoration of blue carbon ecosystems and implement projects around the world that demonstrate the feasibility of blue carbon accounting management and incentive agreements The present book has critically presented the data bank for each community of blue carbon not merely in the form of text description but also through case studies that are the outcomes of research projects and pilot programmes
