A Year Down Yonder by Richard Peck (Puffin, 2000).

When Mary Alice went to live with her formidable Grandma for a year, she never expected to find adventure and love in the small Illinois town.

Word Vines

Purpose

Students apply their knowledge of how words sound (rhyming sounds) and how they look (spelling patterns) to spell new words.

Introducing the Activity

Tell students that although English seems to be a quirky language, full of exceptions, most word spellings do follow regular patterns. They may be surprised to discover that they often know more about word spellings than they realize. Then explain that in this lesson, students will rely on how words sound and look—as well as what they already know—to unlock clues about spelling.

Using the Graphic Organizer

1. Distribute copies of the graphic organizer. Select two key words that share an identical sound or spelling pattern and write these on the flowerpots. For example, you might use pound and gown to represent the identical sound made by ou and ow in these words. Have students copy the words onto their organizers.
2. Discuss the targeted sounds and the spelling differences in the words. Talk about what is the same (vowel sounds) and different (spelling) about the words.
3. Encourage students to brainstorm other words that follow the sound or spelling pattern in each word. Have them fill in the leaves on each vine with words that fit the pattern of the word on each flowerpot.
4. Invite students to share their words with the class. Later have them complete the organizer using other words with targeted sound or spelling patterns.

Taking It Further

Have pairs or small groups list words that share the same vowel sound but have different spellings. Then invite them to create their own word vines from green construction paper, using words from their list.
