Myanmar during a time of crisis Myanmar Agriculture Policy Support Activity, 2025-04-01 Drawing on data from five rounds of the Myanmar Household Welfare Survey MHWS collected between December 2021 and June 2023 with more than 12 000 respondents per round this report analyzes individual migration migration in which one or a few household members leave the household To complement this analysis we utilize data from the Myanmar Migration Assessment carried out in June and July 2023 in a sub sample of MHWS households with household members who have migrated since 2013 Over the year and a half period from December 2021 to June 2023 an estimated 6 451 394 household members 15 and older 11.8 percent of the population and 19.9 percent of the adult population left their households Kayah had the highest percentage of migrants followed by Kachin Kayah and Mon with migration rates over 25 percent of the adult population Significantly more men migrated than women Over the period more individuals left for work within Myanmar than for overseas work or for other reasons including marriage education or to join family Using the Myanmar Migration Assessment sub sample of 5 455 of individuals who have migrated since 2013 we analyze the migration process and destination characteristics Most migrants in our sample only migrated once 91 percent Between 2021 and 2022 there was a huge jump in migration from 10 percent of the sample to 24 percent Further migration was already 23 percent of our sample in June 2023 Therefore individual migration is likely to be much higher in 2023 than 2022 Between 2021 and 2023 most of the individual migration was internal 79 percent versus 21 percent overseas Internal migration and migration abroad are increasing at the same rate Most internal migration was to Yangon followed by Mandalay and Shan Around 27 percent of all individuals migrated to Yangon
