From Conflict to Conciliation Parshotam Mehra, 2004 In the long and chequered annals of the land of the Lama the twentieth century was a period of considerable turmoil To start with the maturity into adulthood of the 13th Dalai Lama 1895 was not a little unusual Again not unlike the Great Fifth he too proved his mettle and survived both a British assault under Younghusband 1904 as well as that of China's Ching rulers 1910-11 Sadly his strongarm methods soon drove the 9th Panchen into exile and the arms of the Guomindang regime Their gap proved hard to bridge and the Lamas died 1933-1937 virtually unreconciled Unhappily for their land the new incarnations too were ranged in opposite camps the 14th DL his own master the 10th Panchen Mao's protege and harbinger of Tibet's liberation 1951 Promises to the contrary notwithstanding the DL soon discovered his autonomy to be a farce and in the wake of the March 1959 Rebellion fled Even though the Lamas had inched closer the Panchen who remained behind presently found himself out of step with his masters And after a long saga of persecution died 1989 a much disillusioned man Leaving behind a Dalai Lama in exile and the status of his own incarnation actually there are two rival candidates a little less than clear
