1991. Climate change has caused substantial increases in the frequency and intensity of extreme weather events, including hurricanes, droughts, and floods. These events have caused significant damage to infrastructure and the environment, and have resulted in the loss of lives and property. The scientific community has reached a consensus that human activities, particularly the burning of fossil fuels, are the primary cause of climate change. This has led to a growing awareness of the need to take action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and to adapt to the impacts of climate change. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) has issued several reports on the state of the climate and the impacts of climate change, and has called for urgent action to address the problem. The Paris Agreement, adopted in 2015, is a landmark international agreement that aims to limit global warming to well below 2°C above pre-industrial levels, and to pursue efforts to limit the temperature increase to 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels. The agreement calls for countries to submit nationally determined contributions (NDCs) to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) to show how they plan to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions. The UNFCCC is the primary international treaty on climate change, and has been ratified by over 190 countries. The agreement is a key step towards addressing the global challenge of climate change, and is a testament to the commitment of the international community to take action to protect the planet for future generations.
