A String of Pearls Angela Barton, 2007-07 I have an inordinate love of nature so when I read my first Haiku I was deeply impressed by its ability to convey such beautiful thoughts in one breath The purpose of my collection is to try to do the same while evoking a strong emotional response and proposing a subject for meditation While knowing that my love of nature is intense I still know that I do not own the tree I planted There is an old Chinese proverb that exhorts us to keep that green tree in our hearts and maybe a songbird will come along Not being attached to the outcome of our wishes often engenders great peace A sense of detachment guarantees serenity and reading Haiku brings the opportunity for such a healthy quietude No one has everything everyone has something sometimes something is nothing having nothing needing nothing wanting nothing is blessed peace I hope you enjoy book A Lost Soul Found in the Darkness Brett C.
