Art, Biology, and Conservation Robert John Koestler, 2003 Despite the perception that artworks are timeless and unchanging they are actually subject to biological attack from a variety of sources from bacteria to fungi to insects This groundbreaking volume which publishes the proceedings of a conference held at The Metropolitan Museum of Art in 2002 explores how the development of these organisms can be arrested while preserving both the work of art and the health of the conservator The richly illustrated text containing the writings of over 40 scientists and conservators is divided into sections on stone and mural paintings paper textiles wood and archaeological materials treatment and prevention and special topics The artworks and cultural properties discussed include among many others Paleolithic cave paintings Tiffany drawings huts built by early Antarctic explorers and a collection of toothbrushes taken from Auschwitz victims

The Emergence of the Professional Watercolourist Greg Smith, 2018-01-12 This title was first published in 2002 Drawing on extensive primary research Greg Smith describes the shifting cultural identities of the English watercolour and the English watercolourist at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century His convincing narrative of the conflicts and alliances that marked the history of the medium and its practitioners during this period includes careful detail about the broader artistic context within which watercolours were produced acquired and discussed Smith calls into question many of the received assumptions about the history of watercolour painting His account exposes the unsatisfactory nature of the traditional narrative of watercolour painting s development into a high art form which has tended to offer a celebratory focus on the innovations and genius of individual practitioners such as Turner and Girtin rather than detailing the anxieties and aspirations that characterized the ambivalent status of the watercolourist The Emergence of the Professional Watercolourist is published with the assistance of the Paul Mellon Foundation
