

Charging

As indicated by the arrow $\Rightarrow$, the negative side of the output current from the charge coil flows and is stored in the condenser. On the other hand, the positive current flows to the power circuit and drives the overheat and over-rev. control circuit.

Sparking

The output current from the pulser coil flows through the noise filter to the SCR gate, thus turning on SCR. When SCR is turned on, the electric charge stored in the condenser is discharged and flows to the primary winding of the ignition coil. As a result, an electromotive force is induced in the secondary winding, thus causing a spark to jump across the spark plug gap.
