State of Innovation Fred L. Block, Matthew R. Keller, 2015-11-17 The worst economic crisis since the Great Depression has generated a fundamental re evaluation of the free market policies that have dominated American politics for three decades State of Innovation brings together critical essays looking at the innovation industry in the context of the current crisis The book shows how government programs and policies have underpinned technological innovation in the US economy over the last four decades despite the strength of free market political rhetoric The contributors provide new insights into where innovations come from and how governments can support a dynamic innovation economy as the US recovers from a profound economic crisis State of Innovation outlines a 21st century policy paradigm that will foster cutting edge innovation which remains accountable to the public

The Linkage Between Technology, Doctrine, and Weapons Innovation Arthur J. Alexander, Rand Corporation, 1981 The theme of this paper is that the linkages between technical innovations and their incorporation in weapons and doctrine are strongly dependent on experiments that generate information about possibilities The main argument is that a crucial step is required between the output of organized R D and the formation of doctrine and weapons procurement decisions This step involves experimentation in the use of the product Today when systematic organized R D can be so successful in producing a dazzling variety of potential technologies subsystems systems and assorted improvements to existing weapons the choice among these is the critical problem Questions surrounding the use of these new things are loaded with the very strong uncertainties that we have come to accept in the technology development process itself An experimental approach to use is a necessary concomitant to the successful incorporation of technology and to the derivation of doctrine that will govern its use Indeed the notion of innovation is just as aptly applied to use as it is to technology The linkages between technology and use therefore require careful and explicit attention Leading American Inventors George Iles,1912 Shooting and Fishing ,1914
