Today, for the first time in history, most people can expect to live into their 60s and beyond (United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs [UNDESA], 2007). And those who reach 60 years of age can expect to live longer than ever before. When combined with marked falls in fertility rates, these increases in life expectancy are leading to the rapid ageing of populations around the world. These changes are dramatic, and they have profound implications for each of us as individuals, as well as for society more broadly.

Longer lives present many opportunities, and the article by Fried (2016) in this supplement makes a strong case that appropriate social investment can create a “third demographic dividend” for society. Yet, the extent of the opportunities that arise from increased longevity will depend heavily on one key factor: health. If people are experiencing these extra years of life with good physical and mental capacity, and if they live in enabling environments, their ability to do the things they value may have few limits. If these added years are instead dominated by declines in capacity and disabling environments, the implications for older people and for society are much more negative. Steadinger, Finkelstein, Calvo, and Sivaramakrishnan (2016) take up this issue and look specifically at the effects of work on health in later life.

Unfortunately, there is only limited information to suggest that older people today are experiencing these extra years in better health than previous generations (Chatterji, Byles, Cutler, Seeman, & Verdes, 2015). Moreover, in many places, neither the policies nor the infrastructure is in place to ensure that the opportunities that arise from population aging can be realized. Public health action on ageing is therefore urgently needed. Yet debate on what this might comprise has been remarkably limited (Lloyd-Sherlock et al., 2012).

To progress action in this area, the World Health Organization (WHO) recently released the first World report on ageing and health (WHO, 2015). Nearly 200 people contributed directly to the report, including authors of a series of background articles, many of which have been refined for academic publication in this supplement. Given the great diversity of issues that are relevant to ageing and health, it is not surprising that the scope of these articles is broad.

The report outlines a public health framework for action on Healthy Ageing that is built around the concept of functional ability. This is defined by the report as “the health related attributes that enable people to be and to do what they have reason to value”. The report emphasizes that this ability is determined by both the intrinsic capacity of the individual and the influence of the environments they inhabit. This builds on capabilities-based approaches used in other fields (Amaná, 2005). The report approaches the changes associated with ageing in the context of the entire life course, yet focuses on the second half of life. It describes some of the important underlying physiologic changes that can occur with age (for example, those outlined in the article by Blume-Peytavi et al. (2016) on skin) but also considers the disorders that become more frequent in older age and that can impact on functioning. These are largely chronic conditions, particularly noncommunicable diseases, hearing loss, and musculoskeletal disorders as discussed by Davis and colleagues (2016) and Briggs and colleagues (2016), respectively.

Many of these can be prevented or delayed by engaging in healthy behaviors across the life course, and the benefits of these behaviors continue into later life (Hrobzonova, Beece, & Fletcher, 2011). The article by Bauman, Merom, Bull, Buchner, and Singh (2016) highlights the importance of these ongoing influences, making a robust case for

World Report Ageing Health Organization:

World Report on Ageing and Health, 2015 Comprehensive public health action on population ageing is urgently needed. This will require fundamental shifts not just in the things we do but in how we think about ageing itself. The World report on ageing and health outlines a framework for action to foster Healthy Ageing built around the new concept of functional ability. This will require a transformation of health systems away from disease based curative models and towards the provision of older person centred and integrated care. It will require the development sometimes from nothing of comprehensive systems of long term care. It will require a coordinated response from many other sectors and multiple levels of in society's future. A future that gives older people the freedom to live lives that previous generations might never have imagined. Page 4 of cover

Handbook of Aging, Health and Public Policy S. Irudaya Rajan, 2025-09-30 This handbook presents the latest information on all aspects of global aging with a focus on Asia including policies age associated diseases and conditions health services long term care living arrangements income and social security preventing abuse and the impact of migration on the elderly. Furthermore the book presents a synthesis of research on population aging social protection policies crimes against the elderly new analyses of trends and discussions of major social policy strategies. Written by academics practitioners and policymakers in the field of gerontology the book offers an informative resource for demographers gerontologists economists anthropologists and other social scientists studying various facets of aging as well as students in the social and health sciences.

World Report on Ageing and Health World Health Organization, 2015-10-22 The WHO World report on ageing and health is not for the book shelf it is a living breathing testament to all older people who have fought for their voice to be heard at all levels of government across disciplines and sectors. Mr Bjarne Hastrup President International Federation on Ageing and CEO DaneAge. This report outlines a framework for action to foster Healthy Ageing built around the new concept of functional ability. This will require a transformation of health systems away from disease based curative models and towards the provision of older person centred and integrated care. It will require the development sometimes from nothing of comprehensive systems of long term care. It will require a coordinated response from many other sectors and multiple levels of government. And it will need to draw on better ways of measuring and monitoring the health and functioning of older populations. These actions are likely to be a sound investment in society's future. A future that gives older people the freedom to live lives that previous generations might never have imagined. The World report on ageing and health responds to these challenges by recommending equally profound changes in the way health policies for ageing populations are formulated and services are provided. As the foundation for its recommendations the report looks at what the latest evidence has to say about the ageing process noting that many common perceptions and assumptions about older people are based on outdated stereotypes. The report's recommendations are anchored in the evidence comprehensive and forward looking yet eminently practical. Throughout examples of experiences from different countries are used to illustrate how specific problems can be addressed through innovation solutions Topics explored range from strategies to deliver comprehensive and person centred services to older populations to policies that enable older people to live in comfort and safety to ways to correct the problems and injustices inherent in current systems for long term care

Lynn Beattie,Finbarr C. Martin,Jeremy D. Walston,2018 The third edition of the definitive international reference book on all aspects of the medical care of older persons will provide every physician involved in the care of older patients with a comprehensive resource on all the clinical problems they are likely to encounter as well as on related psychological philosophical and social issues Shaping Long-Term Care in Emerging Asia Vasoontara S. Yiengprugsawan,John Piggott,2022-12-15 Countries are facing increasing life expectancy and a shrinking family size and in effect this may escalate demands for medical and supportive services The role of families in providing informal care will remain important However the simultaneous decline in the supply of informal caregiving caused by changes in family structure and higher female labour market participation necessitate the expansion of the public role in care provision This book analyses the challenges of long term care LTC policy development and implications from advanced LTC systems and a current trajectory in emerging economies in Asia The book approaches the subject through comparative analysis on what works and what does not to provide insight into public policy options for sustainable LTC provision and financing mechanisms How the countries adopt different approaches to health and social systems towards LTC development could provide important insight and perspectives into policy options in the region This book aims at academics policymakers and practitioners in health social and aged care services and could also be used as a teaching resource for undergraduate students in health and social sciences and postgraduate programs in public health epidemiology social demography gerontology and nursing The book will be of interest to a wider audience not only on social and health consequences of population ageing but also health and social policy relating to older persons Routledge Handbook on Victims' Issues in Criminal Justice Cliff Roberson,2017-04-21 The Routledge Handbook on Victims Issues in Criminal Justice is a comprehensive and authoritative handbook on current issues with a distinctive emphasis on the delivery of suitable and effective services The editor provides an introduction and conclusion to the handbook synthesizing original contributions from current leaders in the field surveying victims rights in the United States victim participation in the criminal justice system victims welfare and needs and most notably the services that have been developed in response A section on special populations in the United States brings focus to current and emerging issues faced within the country while a section covering international and transnational victimization explores globalization and the implications of other legal traditions and systems This handbook addresses the crucial and complex topic of victims issues examining both societal and governmental reactions to victims concerns and acquainting readers with the issues that discord may cause and how they affect the provision of services This book will serve as an essential reference for academics and practitioners working with crime victims as well as for students taking courses in victimology criminology sociology and related subjects ICT Use and Healthy Longevity Kun Wang,Hee Yun Lee,Qiushi Feng,Danan Gu,2025-12-02 With the revolutionary technology advancement and the global population aging there has been increasing recognition of the importance of the use of information and computer technology ICT among older people and the need for ICT inclusivity to ensure that all older individuals can benefit equally from the modern technology ICT use is also considered to has the potential to promote healthy longevity by telehealth and health monitoring social connections cognitive stimulation access to information and lifelong learning among others Although there are growing empirical studies on ICT use at older ages a good summary and review of the current findings especially from those of non Western societies is largely absent Based on a wide range of evidence based analyses and real world examples and a more refined scheme of measures this book presents the most updated findings in the field conducts analyses from cross national and multicultural lens and offers multidisciplinary and comprehensive insights on how individual cultural societal and institutional factors shape ICT use and healthy aging across nations The wide scope and the holistic approach of the book makes it a timely and valuable resource for researchers practitioners policymakers healthcare professionals other stakeholders and anyone interested in understanding the role of ICT in promoting healthy aging and improving the lives of older adults Principles and Practice of Geriatric Medicine M. S. J. Pathy,Alan J. Sinclair,John E. Morley,2006 The fourth edition of Principles and Practice of Geriatric Medicine provides an account of the fundamental changes associated with ageing which are essential to our understanding and management of the elderly sick population The title has been updated to reflect in treatment options and medical conditions Development in an Ageing World United Nations. Department of Economic and Social Affairs,2007 Greater longevity is an indicator of human progress in general Increased life expectancy and lower fertility rates are changing the population structure worldwide in a major way the proportion of older persons is rapidly increasing a process known as population ageing The process is inevitable and is already advanced in developed countries and progressing quite rapidly in developing ones The 2007 Survey analyses the implications of population ageing for social and economic development around the world while recognising that it offers both challenges and opportunities Among the most pressing issues is that arising from the prospect of a smaller labour force having to support an increasingly larger older population Paralleling increased longevity are the changes in intergenerational relationships that may affect the provision of care and income security for older persons particularly in developing countries where family transfers play a major role At the same time it is also necessary for societies to fully recognise and better harness the productive and social contributions that older persons can make but are in many instances prevented from making The Survey argues that the challenges are not insurmountable but that societies everywhere need to put in place the policies required to confront those challenges effectively and to ensure an adequate standard of living for each of their members while respecting and promoting the contribution and participation of all
