Bellinzoni,2010-12-08 Professor Bellinzoni has written a thoughtful and challenging book which must be taken seriously by all those who take the continued influence of Christianity for granted A part of this challenge is to acknowledge the discrediting of central elements of the gospel history But the other challenge just as important is to identify those parts of that tradition which might be reformulated for a future in which the role of Christianity in ethics society and culture is greatly diminished R Joseph Hoffmann Chair Committee for the Scientific Examination of Religion at the Center for Inquiry Professor of Religion Emeritus Wells College Christianity has endured for two thousand years weathering the challenges of clerical corruption religious wars internal schism and scientific criticism Today however there is increasing evidence that institutional Christianity is succumbing to the growing secularism of contemporary society Both church attendance and the number of clergy have noticeably declined Will Christianity survive for another thousand years or even a hundred years In this probing assessment of the state of Christianity biblical scholar Arthur J Bellinzoni boldly asserts that Christianity must break with the past and offer a new vision of the future if it hopes to survive Addressing four issues of central concern Bellinzoni advocates a radical rethinking of the Christian message First he suggests that the God concept must move beyond obsolete notions of a personal God and take its inspiration from such diverse sources as science Taoism Moses Thomas Jefferson and Martin Buber Second

Bellinzoni urges a more sophisticated approach to the Bible one that values its timeless elements but is not afraid to discard its many antiquated features Third he recommends a new emphasis on Jesus social ethic arguing that this could lead to a dramatic redistribution of the world s wealth and greater respect for the planet Fourth Bellinzoni criticizes the persistence of obsolete myth in Christianity demonstrating that without its mythical embellishments Christianity still offers a relevant understanding of the meaning of human existence A work of erudition that is also completely accessible to the lay reader The Future of Christianity provides a stimulating critique that forward thinking Christians will welcome Arthur J Bellinzoni Aurora NY is professor of religion emeritus at Wells College the author of The Future of Christianity Can It Survive The Old Testament An Introduction to Biblical Scholarship The Sayings of Jesus in the Writings of Justin Martyr and the editor of The Two Source Hypothesis and The Influence of the Gospel of Saint Matthew on Christian Literature Before Saint Irenaeus

The Jewish Apocalyptic Tradition and the Shaping of New Testament Thought Benjamin E. Reynolds,Loren T. Stuckenbruck,2017-04-01 The contemporary study of Jewish apocalypticism today recognizes the wealth and diversity of ancient traditions concerned with the unveiling of heavenly matters understood to involve revealed wisdom the revealed resolution of time and revealed cosmology in marked contrast to an earlier focus on eschatology as such The shift in focus has had a more direct impact on the study of ancient pseudepigraphic literature however than in New Testament studies where the narrower focus on eschatological expectation remains dominant In this Companion an international team of scholars draws out the implications of the newest scholarship for the variety of New Testament writings Each entry presses the boundaries of current discussion regarding the nature of apocalypticism in application to a particular New Testament author The cumulative effect is to reveal as never before early Christianity its Christology cosmology and eschatology as expressions of tendencies in Second Temple Judaism
