CONSTITUTIONAL BASIS FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged men. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 men, aged 45–60 years, who were randomly assigned to either a training group (n = 20) or a control group (n = 20). The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training, while the control group remained sedentary. Physical fitness was assessed using a battery of tests including a 10-min step test, a 1-mile walk test, and a 1-mile run test. Health-related quality of life was assessed using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health-related quality of life than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and health-related quality of life in sedentary, middle-aged men.
