Trade Reform And Regional Integration In Africa:

Trade Reform and Regional Integration in Africa African Economic Research Consortium, 1998-12-03 In recent years economic performance in most of sub Saharan Africa has improved Growth has picked up resulting in an increase in per capita output in a number of countries inflation has decelerated markedly and the fiscal and external deficits have been reduced In large part the economic recovery can be attributed to improve macroeconomic and structural policies rather than to favorable external developments such as terms of trade gains Indeed these favorable developments have been achieved at a time when official development assistance has been declining Key structural reforms have been implemented in many African countries including curtailing of price controls dismantling of some inefficient public monopolies privatization elimination of nontariff barriers in most countries and a reduction in import duties in many At the same time exchange rates have been largely freed and unified restrictions on current transactions liberalized and important progress has been made toward market determined interest rates in most countries Regional Trade Arrangements in Africa Yongzheng

Yang, Mr. Sanjeev Gupta, 2005-09-20 In recent years African policymakers have increasingly resorted to regional trade arrangements RTAs as a substitute for broad based trade liberalization This trend has long term implications for the effectiveness of trade policy as a tool for poverty reduction and growth This paper examines the record of RTAs in promoting trade and investment It also explores policy measures that may help improve RTAs performance Regional Economic Integration in the Middle East and North Africa Mustapha Rouis, Steven R. Tabor, 2012-12-11 This book summarizes the constraints to and opportunities for deepening economic integration within the MENA region and beyond Trade and investment reform are discussed together with physical connectivity cross border trade facilitation infrastructure networks and the vital role of logistics De-Fragmenting Africa Paul Brenton and Gozde Isik, Africa is not achieving its potential in regional trade This is of particular importance given the uncertainty surrounding the global economy and stagnation in traditional markets in Europe and North America and the emergence of Africa as a rising growth pole The contributions to this volume highlight the enormous scope for increased cross border trade in Africa in both goods and services and the reasons why such opportunities are not being exploited The varied contributions show that for effective regional integration policy makers must look beyond simply removing tariffs to address barriers on the ground that constrain the daily operations of ordinary producers and traders This requires a reform agenda covering both goods and services that puts in place appropriate regulations for integrated markets and builds the capacity of institutions that are essential for trade across borders The incidence of barriers to regional trade fall most heavily on the poor and women and prevents them from exploiting the opportunities that regional trade provides to diversify exports away from a narrow range of minerals and primary products that have been driving recent growth Regional trade can play a key role in delivering the jobs that are needed for Africa's young populations The chapters have been written in a non technical way to promote dialogue on regional integration in Africa amongst a broad audience that includes policy makers officials academics entrepreneurs consumers as well as the international development community

The Politics of Trade and Industrial Policy in Africa Charles Chukwuma Soludo, Michael Osita Ogbu, Ha-Joon Chang, 2004 This book maps the process and political economy of policy making in Africa It s focus on trade and industrial policy makes it unique and it will appeal to students and academics in economics political economy political science and African studies Detailed case studies help the reader to understand how the process and motivation behind policy decisions can vary from country to country depending on the form of government ethnicity and nationality and other social factors

Assessing Regional Integration in Africa United Nations. Economic Commission for Africa, 2004 This publication examines progress towards regional integration in Africa defined as one of the anchoring ideals of African unity and the basis for the New Partnership for Africa s Development NEPAD development framework The report analyses the current state of the integration process highlighting where efforts have succeeded or failed Findings include that progress has been mixed across sectors regional economic communities and member states with some notable progress in trade communications transport and macroeconomic policy Overall however substantial gaps remain between goals and achievements of most regional economic communities particularly in terms of internal African trade macroeconomic policy convergence production and physical connectivity A summary report is also available ISBN 9211250927

Trade Policy and Regional Integration Paul Collier, Jan Willem Gunning, 1994

Trade, Investment, and Development in the Middle East and North Africa Dipak Das Gupta, Mustapha K. Nabli, 2003-01-01 There is a large potential for expanding trade in the Middle East and North Africa region This work discusses ways forward for trade integration capturing the diversity of country experiences within the region without losing the generality of principles involved

Trade and Industrial Development in Africa Moyo, Theresa, 2015-03-02 This book revisits the perennial challenge that scholars economists and politicians have been grappling with since the 1960s Development in this book has been defined in a context that projects it as a multidimensional and complex process which seeks to enhance the human social economic and cultural welfare of the people This book calls for a rethinking of trade and industry for Africa s development It uses data drawn from national development plans and strategies and trade and industry issues have been prioritized at the continental level in key policy documents On the whole Africa s industry and trade performance have been poor in spite of national regional and continental plans The contributors to this volume propose some alternative strategies and policies which are necessary for trade and industry to grow and to contribute to the well being of Africa s people It calls for a developmental trade and industry policy which fundamentally must be people centred African states should invest time energy and resources to develop policies which will take into consideration African realities The different contributors are aware that Africa has experienced strong economic growth in the recent past but this growth has largely been due to a strong demand for Africa s primary commodity exports It has also been a result of increases in productivity and domestic investment and remittances from Africans living in the Diaspora It is important to note that despite this unprecedented growth performance the impact of trade and industry on development has been limited The book argues that a structural transformation of Africa s economies is inevitable if Africa is to achieve the shift from the dominant paradigm of production and export of primary goods The various contributors to this book agree that there is need to rethink policy and strategy in order to achieve industrial development in Africa There is no unique solution or answer that can fit all situations as African countries are not the same While Africa can draw lessons from other regions which have successfully industrialized this book argues that policies and strategies will have to be adapted to country specific situations and circumstances
