tion) and ECER (European Commission) and worked in universities as teachers, supervisors and editorial boards, we edit journals, special issues of journals etc. The point is we know 'the writing problem' frequently. There needs to be more talk about it, more public discussion of it, more public discussion of it, more public discussion of it. We hope that this book contributes to this discussion in a small way. We hope that the reader of this book is an early career or close to finishing a PhD, not necessarily young, but new to academic publication. Some readers will come from an established tradition of academic writing, some from an emerging tradition where they are obligated to write where they are obligated to write.

Writing For Peer Reviewed Journals Strategies For Getting Published:

Writing for Peer Reviewed Journals Pat Thomson, Barbara Kamler, 2012-11-27 It's not easy getting published but everyone has to do it. Writing for Peer Reviewed Journals presents an insider's perspective on the secret business of academic publishing, making explicit many of the dilemmas and struggles faced by all writers but rarely discussed. Its unique approach is theorised and practical. It offers a set of moves for writing a journal article that is structured and doable but also attends to the identity issues that manifest on the page and in the politics of academic life. The book comprehensively assists anyone concerned about getting published, whether they are early in their career or moving from a practice base into higher education or more experienced but still feeling in need of further information. Avoiding a tips and tricks approach which tends to oversimplify what is at stake in getting published, the authors emphasise the production, nurture and sustainability of scholarship through writing, a focus on both the scholar and the text or what they call text work/identity work. The chapters are ordered to develop a systematic approach to the process, including such topics as The writer, The reader, What's the contribution, Beginning work, Refining the argument, Engaging with reviewers and editors. Writing for Peer Reviewed Journals uses a wide range of multi-disciplinary examples from the writing workshops the authors have run in universities around the world, including the UK, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Ireland, South Africa, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and the United States. This international approach, coupled with theoretically grounded strategies to guide the authoring process, ensure that people at all stages of their career are addressed. This lively book uses a combination of personal stories, student texts, published journal abstracts and excerpts from interviews with journal editors and publishers. Written in an accessible style, one which does not use the patronising 'you of advice' books, it offers a collegial approach to a task which is difficult for most scholars regardless of their years of experience.

Academic Publishing David Coniam, Peter Falvey, 2022-10-02 This book focuses on the topic of academic publishing. It discusses the mounting serious problems that researchers, particularly new researchers, encounter when trying to publish their research. The book addresses the issues of publishing as well as the salient factors militating against academic publication and the mitigating factors encouraging academic publication. It provides potential solutions, suggestions, and strategies for overcoming some of these problems. Growing research output from Southeast Asia, including Singapore, Malaysia, Taiwan, and China, reveals the struggles that many authors have to confront when attempting to publish their work in reputable journals. In both South Africa and other parts of Africa, academic researchers are beginning to show strong evidence of credible academic output. These researchers all need valid outlets for their work and the security that authentic peer review brings to the reviewing process. In the fields of education, social sciences, and professional practices, e.g., architecture and law, recent years have seen the emergence of new outlets for practitioners' research outputs in areas such as one's own practice, self-reflection, and narrative inquiry. These outlets are discussed in this book. The book also discusses the malign influence of predatory publications in detail. This book will be beneficial to university academics, postgraduate students, Ph.D. supervisors, and new researchers.

Helping Doctoral Students Write Barbara Kamler, Pat Thomson, 2014-03-21 Helping Doctoral Students Write offers a proven approach to effective doctoral writing. By treating research as writing and writing as research, the authors offer pedagogical strategies for doctoral supervisors that will assist the production of well-argued and lively dissertations. It is clear that many doctoral candidates find research writing complicated and difficult, but the advice they receive often glosses over the complexities of writing and/or locates the problem in the writer. Kamler and Thomson provide a highly effective framework for scholarly work that is located in personal, institutional, and cultural contexts. The pedagogical approach developed in the book is based on the notion of writing as a social practice. This approach allows supervisors to think of doctoral writers as novices who need to learn new ways with words as they enter the discursive practices of scholarly communities. This involves learning sophisticated writing practices with specific sets of conventions and textual characteristics. The authors offer supervisors practical advice on helping with commonly encountered writing tasks such as the proposal, the journal abstract, the literature review, and constructing the dissertation argument. The first edition of this book has helped many academics and thousands of research students produce better-written material. Now fully updated, the second edition includes examples from a broader range of academic disciplines. A new chapter on writing from the thesis for peer-reviewed journals. More advice on reading and note-taking, performance, and conferences. Further information on developing a personal academic writing style and advice on the use of social media, blogs, tweets, and wikis to create transdisciplinary and transnational networks and conversations. Their discussion of the complexities of forming a scholarly identity is illustrated throughout by stories and writings of actual doctoral students. In conclusion they present a persuasive and proven argument that universities must move away from simply auditing supervision to supporting the development of scholarly research communities Any supervisor keen to help their students develop as academics will find the ideas and practical solutions presented in this book fascinating and insightful reading
