How does Rictus Stachewski show that persistence, even at an early age, does pay off? Use evidence from the text to support your response.

Inventions are Possible, Even at an Early Age

One of the most important things to know about Rictus Stachewski is that he is a very young inventor. He is only ten years old, but he has already invented a lot of things. He has invented a robot that can talk, a car that can fly, and a machine that can make food. He has also invented a way to make a person's shadow disappear. He has even invented a way to make a person's shadow appear. He has a lot of ideas, and he is always trying to make them come true. He is a very persistent inventor, and he is always trying to make his inventions better. He is a very young inventor, and he is always trying to make his inventions better. He is a very persistent inventor, and he is always trying to make his inventions better.
