Data Protection Law and Emotion Damian Clifford, 2024-04-10 Data protection law is often positioned as a regulatory solution to the risks posed by computational systems Despite the widespread adoption of data protection laws however there are those who remain sceptical as to their capacity to engender change Much of this criticism focuses on our role as data subjects It has been demonstrated repeatedly that we lack the capacity to act in our own best interests and what is more that our decisions have negative impacts on others Our decision making limitations seem to be the inevitable by product of the technological social and economic reality Data protection law bakes in these limitations by providing frameworks for notions such as consent and subjective control rights and by relying on those who process our data to do so fairly Despite these valid concerns Data Protection Law and Emotion argues that the ineffectiveness of these laws are often more difficult to discern than the critical literature would suggest while also emphasizing the importance of the conceptual value of subjective control These points are explored and indeed exposed by investigating data protection law through the lens of the insights provided by law and emotion scholarship and demonstrating the role emotions play in our decision making The book uses the development of Emotional Artificial Intelligence a particularly controversial technology as a case study to analyse these issues Original and insightful Data Protection Law and Emotion offers a unique contribution to a contentious debate that will appeal to students and academics in data protection and privacy policymakers practitioners and regulators
