Registerial Expertise in Traditional Chinese Medical Translation Yan Yue, 2025-03-31 Yue's book explores the nature of translation using traditional Chinese medicine TCM and the TCM classic Huangdi Neijing and its various translations Yue examines in great detail and depth the important factors that cause the differences in the translators treatment of language indeterminacies Apart from having multi faceted and fine grained linguistic analysis this book also serves as a good model of methodology in terms of corpus building contrastive analysis exemplification and glossing following systemic functional linguistics SFL convention This book is an argument for greater emphasis on the linguistic notion of register in translator's expertise specifically in the way that professional experience and training with their registerial demands may be the key to semantic decisions forced on a translator by the inevitable vagaries and indeterminacies of establishing a working equivalence across languages and cultures and deep time It probes the issue in an extreme case the debate over who is the ideal translator in Chinese medicine translation through various case studies The result suggests it is possible to demonstrate empirically that clinical experience in translators is likely to have consistent or even measurable consequences This book will be of interest to three different fields translators in training applicable systemic functional linguistics and traditional Chinese medicine communication

Intercultural Communication in Asia: Education, Language and Values Andy Curtis, Roland Sussex, 2018-04-10 This volume presents in depth studies on leading themes in education policy and intercultural communication in contemporary Asia covering empirical as well as theoretical approaches and offering both an in depth investigation of their implications and a synthesis of areas where these topics cohere and point to advances in description analysis and theory policy and applications The studies address key questions that are essential to the future of education in an Asia where intercultural communication is ever more important with the rise of the ASEAN Economic Community and other international initiatives These questions include the properties of the increasing globalisation of communication and how it plays out in Asia especially but not exclusively with reference to English and how we can place intercultural communication in this context as well as studies that highlight intercultural communication and its underlying value systems and ideologies in Asia

Verbal Communication Andrea Rocci, Louis de Saussure, 2016-03-07 Common sense tells us that verbal communication should be a central concern both for the study of communication and for the study of language Language is the most pervasive means of communication in human societies especially if we consider the huge gamut of communication phenomena where spoken and written language combines with other modalities such as gestures or pictures Most communication researchers have to deal with issues of language use in their work Classic methods in communication research from content analysis to interviews and questionnaires not to mention the obvious cases of rhetorical analysis and discourse analysis presuppose the understanding of the meaning of spontaneous or elicited verbal productions Despite its pervasiveness verbal communication does not currently define one cohesive and distinct subfield within the communication discipline The Handbook of Verbal Communication seeks to address this gap In doing so it draws not only on the communication discipline but also on the rich interdisciplinary research on language and communication that developed over the last fifty years as linguistics interacted with the social sciences and the cognitive sciences The interaction of linguistic research with the social sciences has produced a plethora of approaches to the study of meanings in social context from conversation analysis to critical discourse analysis while cognitive research on verbal communication carried out in cognitive pragmatics as well as in cognitive linguistics has offered insights into the interaction between language inference and persuasion and into cognitive processes such as framing or metaphorical mapping The Handbook of Verbal Communication volume takes into account these two traditions selecting those issues and themes that are most relevant for communication scholars It addresses background matters such as the evolution of human verbal communication and the relationship between verbal and non verbal means of communication and offers an extensive discussion of the explicit and implicit meanings of verbal messages with a focus on emotive and figurative meanings Conversation and fundamental types of discourse such as argument and narrative are presented in depth as is the key notion of discourse genre The nature of writing systems as well as the interaction of spoken or written language with non verbal modalities are devoted ample attention Different contexts of language use are considered from the mass media and the new media to the organizational contexts Cultural and linguistic diversity is addressed with a focus on phenomena such as multilingual communication and translation A key feature of the volume is the coverage of verbal communication quality Quality is examined both from a cognitive and from a social perspective It covers topics that range from to the cognitive processes underlying deceptive communication to the methods that can be used to assess the quality of texts in an organizational context
