need of the individual is more important than the need of others Everyone has this form within them Another form of empathy is innate This form of empathy is based in an innate feeling of care for others These two forms of empathetic care determine how we treat others and our self Instinctual empathy cares more about oneself before others This manifests as disharmony with others and becomes problematic for society This is the basis of selfishness If a person has innate empathy they tend to be caring but care at their own expense They feel the pain of others and another s pain often becomes theirs too This causes the individual to feel disharmonious within oneself There is a way to solve both kinds of empathetic disharmony Empathy is a connective energy It does not tell you how you connect with yourself or others you do with the depths of your being or you do not This book will teach you how to be in harmony with the essence of your empathy
