

WOLF

The wolf has long been described as the villain of the forest, which is very dangerous to humans.

In "Little Red Riding Hood" the big bad wolf eats his grandmother and in "The Wolf and the Seven Little Goats" little goat children wander into his stomach.

In reality, farmers hunted the wolf because he likes to eat man's goats, sheep and cattle. Wolves stay away from humans and are not dangerous to them.

For more than 100 years, wolves were considered extinct in many forests of Europe. But now they are back: biologists have introduced them in several parts of Europe.

The wolf is a predator from which all dog breeds known today are descended. Wolves are about the size and weight of a German shepherd.

Wolves live mainly in the northern hemisphere and inhabit forests, but also grasslands and bushlands, rocky regions or mountains. They live in Europe, Asia and North America.

The wolf has a similar physique to a German Shepherd. It has long, slender legs, a large head and a long muzzle. Wolves grow up to 85 cm. They weigh between 28 and 40 kg. They are yellowish-grey, grey-brown or dark brown.

Wolves eat deer. But they also feed on wild boars, hares, wild sheep and geese. They also hunt lizards, snakes, frogs, and insects. From time to time, they also eat apples, peaches, figs, melons, blueberries, raspberries and cherries.

Wolves live in families called packs. Usually, a family has about eight members.
