

When it is rubbed with nylon, a PVC rod gains electrons and is negatively charged. The rod has been attracted to by static force though the rod is being treated as neutral. The rod keeps its charge. What is the process of induction?

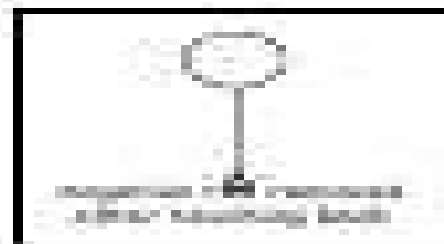

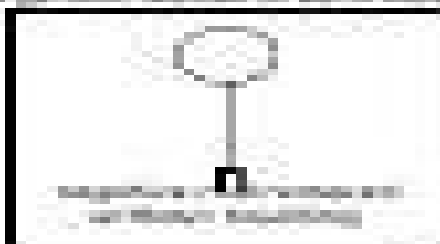

1. When the rod touches the metal sphere, electrons move to the left. Induction becomes conduction contact and the rod and sphere act as one as possible. In the first diagram, draw an arrow showing the direction the electrons move. When the rod is removed, the sphere is left with a net charge. The process is charging by conduction and is called contact. In the second diagram, draw the net charge on the sphere.

2. The following series shows a pole being charged. In each case, draw the arrangement that charge distribution has had.

3. Charging a metal sphere without touching is called induction. The side of the object closest to the charging distribution is charge that is like same as, opposite that of the charging rod. The process is charging by induction and is called contact.

4. Draw the lines on the electrostatic lines, and use a positive and a negative charge to show the charge distribution in each case.
