Deepening decentralization in Zambia: Political economy constraints and opportunities for reform Resnick, Danielle, Siame, Gilbert, Mulambia, Peter, Ndhlovu, Dorothy, Shicilenge, Beverly, Sivasubramanian, Bhavna, 2019-12-20 Since the early 2000s decentralization has been espoused as a major policy goal of successive Zambian governments With the passing of the 2019 Local Government Act a greater understanding is needed of how decentralization has progressed thus far in Zambia and how political economy dynamics have constrained the process As such a survey was conducted with 153

bureaucrats across 16 councils in four Zambian provinces complemented by interviews with elected ward councilors Three key findings emerge First the organizational setting in which councils operate undermines the continuity of service provision In particular transfers of staff by the Local Government Service Commission LGSC partially driven by the growth in the number of councils in recent years increases pressure on the wage bill of local authorities creates uncertainty for civil servants and undermines institutional memory Second the unwillingness to cede genuine autonomy to local councils by the Ministry of Local Government MLG repeatedly emerged A perception of low levels of consultation with council bureaucrats and elected councilors especially when statutory instruments are issued reinforce that accountability remains upwards to the MLG rather than downwards to citizens Third within the councils there is a mismatch in incentives between the bureaucrats and politicians that can undermine policy implementation while the former respect authority and attention to procedures the latter are focused on constituents priorities and may bypass formal procedures to deliver to their voters Based on interviews with market committees and solid waste companies these dynamics have negative externalities on citizen perceptions and service provision in urban areas As one of the few analyses conducted with local bureaucrats to assess their experiences with decentralization the study aims to advance both policy and scholarship about the political economy dynamics surrounding efforts to strengthen subnational capabilities in developing countries

The Oxford Handbook of the Zambian Economy ,2024-08-23 This handbook offers a comprehensive and authoritative account of the Zambian economy including past and current trends The Zambian economy has evolved from simple and fragmented agrarian activities at the turn of the 20th Century into a wide range of organized and regulated modern economic activities today While the economy has largely revolved around the mining industry since the early 1920s when the extraction of copper and other mineral ores on the Copperbelt begun there has been a gradual broadening of economic activities over time with services now accounting for almost two thirds of gross domestic product GDP This book shows that since colonial times one of the persistent items on the economic development agenda in what is today known as Zambia has been the need to diversify the economy to reduce dependence on mining in terms of foreign exchange earnings and public revenue While the need to diversify the economy has been well acknowledged by successive Zambia governments including the current government achieving this goal has proved to be elusive so far By presenting a collection of well researched and empirically supported chapters on the key areas of the Zambian economy this volume gives readers a good sense of where the Zambian economy has come from where it is at the moment but also highlights the challenges and prospects for economic growth
