Abstract

The protesters' demonstration will take place at Parliament's main gates (Pillory entrance), at about 10.30am, and will last for about 15 minutes. The protesters will be carrying banners and flags, and will be singing songs. The protesters will also be holding up a large banner that reads "We are the people of the Republic of Ireland". The protesters will be asking the government to stop the sale of arms to Northern Ireland.

- History (last 10 years) (social, political, economic, technological)
- Current use (if used) (national, regional, etc.) (not primary purpose) and past applications (any left)

1. Efficiently store normal data corresponding to regular features (e.g. text, images, etc.)
2. Efficiently store sparse data (e.g. features associated with specific high level categories)
However, this feature design strategy may not be very effective when the number of features is small compared to the total number of features (e.g. generating text).
3. Embeddings with an L2/L1 or cosine constraint
It is to represent the underlying global structure and constraints, such as semantic roles, semantic relations and co-occurrence between different words and phrases, etc. that global structure could be represented, e.g. distributing the L2/L1 L1.
4. Embeddings with structural information through joint optimization
It takes the structural information and optimizes simultaneously with efficiency in the model and results in better performance. For example, we can use the structural information to constrain the embedding.
5. Handling the high dimensional data (e.g. images, etc.) efficiently using local features
The main idea is to use local features to represent the data, e.g. using local features to represent the image.
