When Women Come First Gender And Class In Transnational Migration:

When Women Come First Sheba George, 2005-07-18 With a subtle yet penetrating understanding of the intricate interplay of gender race and class Sheba George examines an unusual immigration pattern to analyze what happens when women who migrate before men become the breadwinners in the family Focusing on a group of female nurses who moved from India to the United States before their husbands she shows that this story of economic mobility and professional achievement conceals underlying conditions of upheaval not only in the families and immigrant community but also in the sending community in India This richly textured and impeccably researched study deftly illustrates the complex reconfigurations of gender and class relations concealed behind a quintessential American success story When Women Come First explains how men who lost social status in the immigration process attempted to reclaim ground by creating new roles for themselves in their church Ironically they were stigmatized by other upper class immigrants as men who needed to play in the church because the nurses were the bosses in their homes At the same time the nurses were stigmatized as lower class sexually loose women with too much independence George s absorbing story of how these women and men negotiate this complicated network provides a groundbreaking perspective on the shifting interactions of two nations and two cultures

Gracia Liu-Farrer, Brenda S.A. Yeoh, Michiel Baas, 2023-03-31 Selecting migrants based on skill has become a widely practised migration policy in many countries around the world Since the late 20th century research on skilled and highly skilled migration has raised important questions about the value and ethics of skill based labour mobility More recent research has begun to question the concept of skill and skill categorisation in both government policy and academic research Taking the view that skills are socially constructed categories and highly malleable concepts in practice this edited volume centres the discussion on the following questions Who are the arbitrators of skill What constitutes skill And how is skill constructed in the migration process and in turn how does skill affect the mobility The empirical studies in this volume show that diverse actors are involved in the process of identifying evaluating and shaping migrant skill The interpretation of migrants skill is frequently distorted by their ascriptive characteristics such as race ethnicity gender and nationality reflecting the influence of colonial legacy global inequality as well as social stratification Finally this edited volume emphasises the complex and frequently reciprocal relationship between skill and mobility This book will be of interest to researchers and advanced students of Sociology Human Geography Politics Social Anthropology Economics and Social Work It was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies
