

DT125MX

Engine

Quite simply, a V2 engine selected for fast riding. Entirely constructed of light alloy steel, it features such essential developments as reed valve intake and seven-port torque induction system, which gives greater flexibility and torque at low revs. Electronic CDI ignition makes for easier starts and a faster performance, and the six speed gearbox is suited for riding on both road and off-road. The clutch is wet multi-plate, and the engine can be coasted whilst in gear.

Monoshock shock absorbers

From multi cross experience, and introduced by Yamaha in 1973, comes the hydro-pneumatic DeCarbon Monoshock system, ensuring consistent performance, greater comfort and better damping. The spring pre-load is adjustable.

Frame

The frame of the DT125MX is very similar to that of a V2 motorcycle. The semi-double tubular cradles, adapted from the Blower cross suspension developed by Yamaha. The four-section cantilever style swinging arm gives much greater rigidity to the rear sub-frame. The Blower cross suspension, with its single pivot, means that the bike is remarkably stable over the roughest terrain.

Lubrication

The oil tank on the side of the machine holds 5 litres of lubricant for the separate lubricate system. A pump sends the pressurised oil to critical points depending on the engine's speed. So there's no more need for petrol oil mixes and emission of fumes is reduced.

Instruments

Beside its racing origins, the DT125MX comes fitted with sophisticated street equipment. The motor-aided handbrake is underbraked by a padded fork. Controls are located sensibly and the speedometer and tachometer dials are integral to the independent warning lights. The 12-watt grid protected headlight provides excellent lighting. The mirrors are moulded to fit the hand and are hence very pleasing to use.
