Gupta,Durg Singh Chauhan,Thomas Hanne,2019-10-24 The work presented in this book is based on empirical study undertaken as a case study to understand the challenges faced in massively open online course MOOC based learning and experimentation to understand the challenges for presenting theoretical and practical courses The book proposes a flexible online platform This solution provides flexibility in distance learning processes including course enrollment learning evaluation and outcome of degrees The proposed system not only gives students freedom to choose their courses in accordance with their needs but also use earned credit towards online degrees of any university of their choice

Understanding the Human Factor of the Energy Transition: Mechanisms Underlying Energy-Relevant Decisions and Behaviors Tobias Brosch,David Sander,Martin K. Patel,2016-06-27 An increasing number of countries are shifting toward sustainable energy economies emphasizing the use of renewable energy sources increases in energy efficiency and the abatement of greenhouse gas emissions The success of such an energy transition will depend not only on the development of new energy technologies but also on major changes in the patterns of individual energy related decisions and behaviors resulting in substantial reductions in energy demand Consequently the behavioral sciences can make important contributions to the energy transition by increasing our understanding of the multiple factors and mechanisms that underlie individual as well as group based decisions and behaviors in the energy domain and by creating a basis for systematic interventions that reduce energy usage Many different types of relevant behaviors and decisions need to be considered in this context including decisions to invest in energy efficient household equipment adjustments of energy critical habits related to heating eating or mode of transportation and participation in the political discourse related to questions of energy An integration of the expertise of the different disciplines of the behavioral sciences is thus needed to comprehensively investigate the impact of the different drivers and barriers that may determine energy related decisions and behaviors including economic factors such as price level social factors such as norms communication patterns and social learning processes and individual factors such as values attitudes beliefs heuristics affective biases and emotions The potential impact of these factors on the success of the energy transition is considerable for example a recent projection of the energy demand in Switzerland until 2050 has estimated the reduction potential related to psychological and sociological factors between 0% and 30% depending on which behavioral changes will be implemented in society Increased research efforts from the behavioral sciences are required to ensure that the full reduction potential can be achieved This Research Topic brings together contributions from different disciplines such as psychology affective science behavioral economics economics sociology consumer behavior business science sociology and political science that improve our understanding of the many factors underlying decision making and behavior in the energy domain and contribute to the development of targeted interventions that aim at reducing energy demand based on these factors Technical Report Tennessee Valley Authority,1964 Climatological Data for the United States by Sections ,1940 A collection of the monthly climatological reports of the states originally issued separately for each associated with maternal health Many negative life experiences such as infertility and perinatal loss poverty discrimination social inequalities lack of autonomy violence economic dependency and isolation have long lasting impact on mothers mental health and wellbeing To comprehensively understand the drive of maternal health a multilevel and bio social approach of social determinants of women s health is integral

Social Policy and Public Policy Lee Rainwater, This classic volume was originally designed as an introduction to social science perspectives on a broad range of social issues in American society specifi cally the complex social problems of the 1960s Because the volume is structured as a survey it is neither exhaustive or defi nitive It does provide a wide range of information about these problems as well as the many diff erent policy initiatives that were developed to cope with them Readers can learn a great deal about the common themes predilections and quandaries that characterized United States responses to the complex problems of the 1960s and the patterns of inequality and injustice prevalent at that time The essays were selected to cover the range of substantive problematic issues of the period the social science perspectives that were brought to bear on them and the range of social science methodologies used Finally the selections emphasize the contributions that can be made to understanding social problems by intensive and rigorous social science research Journalists and popular writers use a common sense approach to their study of social problems and the results are often imaginative and incisive Th e tools of social scientists produce information and analyses that contribute far more to our understanding than even the most insightful journalist can achieve Th e selections in this volume highlight the deeper and more fundamental understanding of social issues that can come from rigorous analysis of government statistics and from special sample surveys from in depth ethnographic studies Lee Rainwater is professor emeritus of sociology at Harvard University He was one of the original founders of Transaction Publishers He has written books and articles in many professional journals
