

A woman with dark hair, wearing a pink shirt and a grey patterned sari, is working on a large, complex textile machine. The machine has many vertical frames, each containing a large red bobbin. The woman is looking down at her work. The background is slightly blurred, showing more of the machine and the factory environment.

The Trade Trap Poverty And The Global Commodity Markets:

The Trade Trap Belinda Coote,1992 This work explores the extent to which developing countries are dependent upon primary commodities and the devastating impact that a sudden fall in prices on the international market can have on the lives of individual producers Other work by the author includes The Hunger Trap

Trade Trap: Poverty and the Global Commodity Markets Belinda Coote,1996 This work explains how countries that depend on the export of primary commodities like coffee or cotton are caught in a trap the more they produce the lower the price falls on the international market

The Oxfam Poverty Report Kevin Watkins,1995 Fifty years ago the United Nations Charter proclaimed universal rights to shared prosperity peace and security How far has that vision of world citizenship been realised Despite advances in human welfare and technology there is today a growing polarisation between rich and poor One in four of the world s people live in absolute poverty unable to meet their basic needs armed conflict is affecting millions of people and the global environment is under threat Yet there is a failure of political will to address the silent emergency of poverty The Oxfam Poverty Report draws on Oxfam s experience of working in over 70 countries to examine the causes of poverty and conflict It identifies the structural forces which deny people their basic rights and gives a wide range of examples of the ways in which men and women are bringing about positive change at every level from the household to the international arena Oxfam believes that it is time to renew the UN vision of universal basic rights The Report concludes by proposing policy and institutional reforms which would transform international institutions and trading relations and calls for a new commitment to work together to eradicate poverty and bring sustainable peace and security for all the world s people

Fair Trade and a Global Commodity Peter Luetchford,2007-11-20 Fair trade is widely regarded as a universal good This fascinating anthropological study takes a closer look at a coffee growing community and cooperatives in Costa Rica and subjects the fair trade movement to critical scrutiny As with conventional coffee Western demand for organic fair trade produce is largely met by more affluent individuals with larger landholdings As a result it is caught up in the conflicts of interest and resentments that are part of the coffee industry as a whole Ultimately fair trade fails to escape divisions that characterise other forms of production and consumption All growers are united in their criticism of the high margins accumulated by regional and transnational processors and exporters Sustainability just rewards and social cohesion have formed part of the world view of these agricultural communities for decades This book shows how there is much common ground between the worlds of the commodity grower and the priorities of the fair trade movement if not necessarily always in the ways we might suppose
