

Thread cutter

On the back of the presser bar you will find a notch, the thread cutter, which makes it easy for you to cut off the threads.

Now you can begin to sew

On the right side of the machine, you will find the knobs which are necessary for different types of stitching. The upper left knob is the regulating knob for the starting position. The upper right knob is the stitch length knob and the lower is the stitch width knob. We will come to the setting of utility seams later on.

We begin by sewing a straight stitch which is the seam most frequently used. The sewing machine is adjusted for straight stitching when it leaves the factory but for the sake of certainty, check that the knobs are set as shown on the picture. The adjustment knob for the starting position should be set on the center symbol, the stitch length knob on approximately 2, which is the normal stitch length, and the stitch width knob should be set on 0 for straight stitching.
