Natural Compounds as Antimicrobial Agents Carlos M. Franco , Beatriz Vázquez Belda, 2020-12-02 The world is full of plants and animals that have their own defenses producing various substances in their daily fight against bacteria fungi or other agents These products are alternatives to conventional antimicrobials that have a poor reputation with consumers Many of these compounds are well known however the multiple types of structures together with the variable responses depending of the type of biocontrol needed in a wide range of applications such as clinical agricultural general hygiene and food necessitates the continuous search for specific applications and the continuous study of how to use these substances The present book provides a summary of reviews and original research works that explore the multiple alternatives for the use of these compounds

Soil borne plant pathogens are responsible for many diseases in plants and have large genetic diversity affecting plants in warm temperate subtropical as well as tropical zones This has a significant impact on the economics of both developed and developing countries worldwide Unfortunately the protection of plants is mainly provided through the extensive use of synthetic chemicals These have demonstrated their protective efficiency but at the expense of having detrimental effects on both the health of humans and the environment Furthermore several soil borne plant diseases have no effective chemical treatment Because of the nature of hidden enemy soil borne genetic diversity high multiplication rate diverse infestation mode wide host range and complicated biology soil borne plant pathogens are usually difficult to manage and cannot be adequately controlled by single management practice Therefore it necessitates the implementation of an IDM strategy to minimize the pathogen impact and reduce disease losses Integrated disease management IDM in plant protection includes multiple strategies and kinds of control measures to reduce chemical pesticides It includes the development of diverse ways of combining complementary approaches to manage pests by promoting the eco friendly use of natural molecules and biocontrol microbes alone or in combination to manage plant pathogens without having an impact on non target species Because of their ability to inflict heavy damage to the economically important plants they infect soil born plant pathogens have been the subject of intensive research and scientists are struggling to explore the IDM approach combining cultural practices biological control measures and resistance of host plants to manage them In this Research Topic we welcome original research review mini review and systematic review papers on the latest findings related to the integrated management of soil born plant pathogens and the underlying action
