

The background of the book cover is a photograph of a traditional Korean stone cellar, known as a jangjuk. The interior is constructed from rough-hewn stone blocks, forming a vaulted ceiling and walls. On the left side, there are several long wooden shelves filled with numerous ceramic jars, likely used for storing fermented foods like kimchi or soy sauce. In the center, a wooden door is open, revealing a set of stone steps leading up to a bright opening at the end of the cellar. The floor is made of dirt or stone, showing some wear and debris. The overall atmosphere is one of a well-used, traditional storage space.
