Writing For Change A Community Reader:

Writing for Change Ann Watters, Marjorie Ford, 1994-09 WRITING FOR CHANGE A COMMUNITY READER is a thematic reader designed for the first or second course in Freshmen Composition It provides a rich selection of readings that address issues concerning family community work education health diversity and the environment The innovative approach of WRITING FOR CHANGE is to enable students to move from private reflection to public statement and to an active role in changing their community on issues of public concern that bind us together as a community This strong contemporary reader can be used in any composition course and can also be used with the companion handbook A GUIDE FOR CHANGE to develop a writing course that focuses on community based writing Writing the Community Linda Adler-Kassner, Robert Crooks, Ann Watters, 2023-07-03 The first volume in AAHE and Campus Compact's series on service learning in the disciplines the book discusses the microrevolution in college level Composition through service learning The essays in this volume show why service learning and communication are a natural pairing and give a background on the relationship between service learning and communication with maps to suggest where it should go in the future Experiencing Citizenship Richard M. Battistoni, William E. Hudson, 2023-07-03 This practical guide is intended for faculty and service learning directors combining the how to information and rigorous intellectual framework that teachers seek What distinguishes this volume is that the contributors are writing for their peers They discuss how service learning can be implemented within political science and what this discipline contributes to the pedagogy of service learning The book offers both theoretical background and practical pedagogical chapters which describe the design implementation and outcomes of political science service learning programs as well as annotated bibliographies program descriptions and course syllabi Nonacademic Writing Ann Hill Duin, Craig J. Community Writing Paul S. Collins,2001-02-01 Community Writing Researching Social Issues Through Composition employs a series of assignments that guide students to research and write about issues confronting their individual communities Students start by identifying a community to which they belong and focusing on problems in it and then analyze possible solutions construct arguments for them decide which are likely to succeed and consider how to initiate action This is a primary text for first year composition courses covering the basics of the writing process The assignments are recursive Short writing assignments in each chapter build up to longer papers Each of the assignment questions is accompanied by a guide to thinking about and writing the assigned paper followed by a short Focus On reading that provides a brief account of community activism a media case study or a notable success story The longer papers are accompanied by in class peer reading groups Each successive peer reading attempts a higher level of conceptual critique By working together throughout the semester students create increasingly adept peer groups familiar with all stages of each other s research The book is carefully structured but there is plenty of give in it allowing instructors to be flexible in adapting it to the needs of their students and courses Community Writing is distinguished by pedagogy based on a collaborative process oriented service learning approach that emphasizes media critique and field research on community issues chosen by individual students answers real student questions such as Where do I find articles on my topic What if evidence contradicts my hypothesis How do I know if a source is biased is web savvy guides students into building their own Web sites including a unique guide for critiquing the design and veracity of other people s websites and is media savvy topics include media monopolies spin control dumbing down misleading statistics the Freedom of Information Act crackpot authors political rhetoric and fallacious argumentation
