Kenneth George Willis, R. Kerry Turner, Ian Bateman, 2001 Urban Planning and Management presents a collection of key articles on different aspects of sustainability in urban planning and management whilst simultaneously illustrating the conflicting arguments about whether and how sustainability should be achieved. Part I covers the factors determining the life and death of cities and what is required to achieve sustainable development. In Part II issues of whether cities should be compact or dispersed and concepts of sustainable development in third world cities and societies are explored. Parts III and IV examine design as an integral part of producing a sustainable urban policy and energy use. Part V deals with Local Agenda 21 issues and Part VI looks at town planning. Part VII discusses transport as both a product and determinant of sustainable urban planning and management. Parts VIII, IX and X examine the sustainable provision of other services including waste collection, recycling schemes and water. In Part XI sustainability is shown as occurring within and constrained by legal property rights and management practices.

Healing the Modern in a Central Javanese City Steve Ferzacca, 2001

Healing the Modern in a Central Javanese City is an ethnographic examination of urban medicine and the hybrid medical practices and perceptions encountered in the city of Yogyakarta, Indonesia. Based on observations, interviews and other data, Ferzacca not only illustrates the plurality of Javanese approaches to their own health but also how this medical pluralism was nurtured during the Suharto regime by an Indonesian nationalist discourse on the health of modernity. Healing the Modern also explores how the contours of medical pluralism in this Javanese urban landscape are built from a particular architecture or structure of experience that articulates Javanese notions of the self and identity. From these concerns Healing the Modern spans interests in both medical anthropology and cultural psychology. It is a book that both the specialist and the generalist can appreciate. This book will also be invaluable for readers interested in more specific areas of ethnography such as literature and writing, culture issues, phenomenological approaches in ethnography, the ethnography of Indonesia or theoretical approaches relevant to urban ethnography and anthropology. This book is part of the Ethnographic Studies in Medical Anthropology Series edited by Pamela J. Stewart and Andrew Strathern, Department of Anthropology, University of Pittsburgh.
