American Book Publishing Record ,2007 Historical Studies in Industrial Relations ,2005 Worker Needs and Voice in the US and the UK Alex Bryson,Richard B. Freeman,2006 Workers have responded differently to declining union density in the US and UK US workers have unfilled demand for unions whereas many UK workers free ride at unionized workplaces To explain this difference we create a scalar measure of worker needs for representation and relate desire for unionism to this measure and to the choices that the US and UK labor relations systems offer workers Our measure of needs has similar properties across countries and is the single most important determinant of worker desire for unions and collective representation Conditional on needs we find that in both countries workers are more favourable to unions when management is positive toward unions but also favor them when management strongly opposes unionism compared to management having a neutral view Much of the difference in the response of US and UK workers to declining unionism appears to be due to the different institutional arrangements for voice that the countries offer to workers International Labour Review ,2017 Industrial Relations in Europe ,2006 Industrial Relations in Europe 2006 ,2006 The 2006 version of the bi annual report outlines industrial relations trends at the national level social partners as membership organisations the interaction between collective bargaining and labour law workplace representation and at European level European Social Dialogue European labour law Finally it discusses trends at the labour market and the contribution of social dialogue to economic performance
