Regional Water System Management Enrique Cabrera, R. Cobacho, Jay Lund, 2002-01-01 The spectacular industrial and economic development of the twentieth century was achieved at a considerable environmental cost. The increasingly precarious position of water, the most valuable of natural resources, reflects this trend. Today we have come to realise that concepts of sustainable development need to Confronting the Nation's Water Problems National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Water Science and Technology Board, Committee on Assessment of Water Resources Research, 2004-11-14. In order to confront the increasingly severe water problems faced by all parts of the country, the United States needs to make a new commitment to research on water resources. A new mechanism is needed to coordinate water research currently fragmented among nearly 20 federal agencies. Given the competition for water among farmers, communities, aquatic ecosystems, and other users, as well as emerging challenges such as climate change and the threat of waterborne diseases, Confronting the Nation's Water Problems concludes that an additional 70 million in federal funding should go annually to water research. Funding should go specifically to the areas of water demand and use, water supply augmentation, and other institutional research topics. The book notes that overall federal funding for water research has been stagnant in real terms for the past 30 years and that the portion dedicated to research on water use and social science topics has declined considerably.

The Evolution of Markets for Water Jeff Bennett, 2005-01-01. How policymakers are striving to move away from government regulation and achieve a balance between a property rights and a market-based approach to the allocation of water resources.

Climate Change: Science, Strategies, and Solutions Eileen Claussen, 2022-05-16. It is the greatest environmental challenge of the 21st Century. But what do we truly know about global climate change? And what can we do about it? Most of the world's top scientists agree that emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases from human activities, such as industrial processes, fossil fuel combustion, and land use changes, are causing the earth to get warmer. Impacts of this warming may include damage to our coastal areas, accelerated rates of species loss, altered agricultural patterns, and increased incidences of infectious diseases. The effects of climate change and efforts to mitigate climate change could also have substantial economic ramifications. The book presents the latest research and analysis from prominent scientists, economists, academics, and policy makers, including Tom Wigley and Joel Smith, who, along with other authors of the Science and Impacts chapter, explain the basic science of climate change, the growing evidence that human activities are changing our climate, and the impacts of these changes. Eileen Claussen, John Gummer, Henry Lee, and other authors of the Global Strategies chapter, who describe what nations are or are not doing to address climate change and the state of international climate talks Robert Stavins John Weyant Ev Ehrlich and other economists who explain why economic analyses of climate policy are conducted why the projected costs of addressing climate change vary so widely among economic models and how changes driven by today s economy can influence climate policy Gov Jean Shaheen and other authors of the Innovative Solutions chapter who describe what state and local governments in the United States and multinational companies are doing to monitor and curb greenhouse gas emissions and Forest Reinhardt who offers business leaders advice on steering their companies on a path that is healthy for business as well as the global climate This publication has also been published in paperback please click here for details Water Policy and Planning in a Variable and Changing Climate Kathleen A. Miller,Alan F.

and examines the development of water law Water Accounting Jayne M. Godfrey, Keryn Chalmers, 2012 This groundbreaking book examines the role that water accounting can play in resolving economic environmental and social issues One of the most pressing global issues of the 21st century is the scarcity of water to ensure economic environmental and social sustainability In addressing the issue through policy and management access to high quality information is critically important But water scarcity has many implications and it is possible that different reporting approaches generally called water accounting systems can be appropriate to addressing them In this key book international experts respond to the question what role can water accounting play in resolving economic social and environmental issues at individual organizational industry national and international levels They explore how various forms of water accounting are utilized and the issues that they address Academics and postgraduate students interested in water scarcity and accounting will find this book invaluable Policymakers in all areas relating to water as well as environmentalists water industry managers and water lawyers will find plenty of important insights in this essential resource Central Valley Project Improvement Act (CVPIA) of 1992 Implementation, Programmatic EIS ,1999 Central Valley Project Improvement Act ,1999 Central Valley Project Improvement Act: Response to comments (3 v.) ,1999 Environmental Water Markets and Regulation Katherine Owens, 2016-11-18 River systems around the world are degraded and are being used unsustainably Meeting this challenge requires the development of flexible regimes that have the potential to meet essential consumptive needs while restoring environmental flows This book focuses on how water trading frameworks can be repurposed for environmental water recovery and aims to conceptualise the most appropriate role for law in supporting recovery through these frameworks The author presents a comprehensive study of the legal frameworks in four jurisdictions the States of Oregon and Colorado in the western United States the province of Alberta in Canada and the Murray Darling Basin in Australia Basin State of New South Wales A close comparative analysis of these four jurisdictions reveals a variety of distinctive regulatory arrangements and collaborations between public and private actors In all cases the law has been deployed to steer and coordinate these water governance activities The book argues that each regime is based on a particular regulatory strategy with different conceptions of the appropriate roles for and relationships between various actors and institutions Legal frameworks do not have the capacity to rationalise and provide an overarching and absolute solution to the complex environmental and governance issues that arise in the context of environmental water transactions Rather the role of law in this context needs to be reconceptualised within the paradigm of regulatory capitalism as establishing and maintaining the limits within which regulatory participants can operate innovate and collaborate
