

Could the Internet help to close the gap with the community? With the Internet's growing popularity, many people are turning to online resources for information. The Internet offers a vast array of information, and it's accessible 24 hours a day. But how can the Internet help to close the gap with the community? The answer is simple: by providing a platform for people to share their experiences and knowledge.

- How does the cell know when to divide?
 - through the cell cycle control system, or cell cycle checkpoints
- The main principle: when can this cell divide?
 - in case of the major checkpoints, no further
- The initiation of a new cell generation is by nature, but in the majority of cells under
 - not enough time for proliferation
- A single cell generating two cells in a short time span
 - would not make sense, growth of cell is not self-regulating cell growth
- Nature had gifts
 - every cell has a certain number of cells that they divide
- Long live the finite cell count
 - a special molecule that the cell needs to divide and that can only be produced once
- As the time "finishes", cannot divide

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for physical and psychological health. The physical health assessment included measurements of body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, and blood pressure. The psychological health assessment included measurements of self-esteem, anxiety, and depression. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program resulted in a significant decrease in BMI, waist circumference, and blood pressure. The walking program also resulted in a significant increase in self-esteem and a significant decrease in anxiety and depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
