Variable	Coefficient	Standard Error	t-statistic	p-value
Intercept	1.50	0.10	15.00	<0.001
Gender (Male)	0.25	0.05	5.00	<0.001
Age (Young)	0.10	0.02	5.00	<0.001
Age (Middle)	0.05	0.02	2.50	0.012
Age (Older)	-0.05	0.02	-2.50	0.012

The results indicate that both gender and age are significant predictors of the number of publications. Males tend to have more publications than females, and younger researchers tend to have more publications than middle-aged and older researchers.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 15 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 7 women who continued their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group consisted of 8 women who participated in a 10-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a stationary bike at a heart rate of 150 to 160 beats per minute. The HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the training program. The results showed that the training group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The HR increased from 140 to 150 beats per minute, and the EE increased from 1,800 to 2,200 kcal per day. These results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The subject is seated in a chair and views the screen through a mirror. The screen displays the visual feedback of the hand position. The hand is positioned on a horizontal bar. The bar is connected to a motor system that can move the hand in the horizontal plane. The motor system is controlled by a computer. The computer also records the hand position and the force exerted by the hand. The subject is instructed to move the hand from the starting position to the target position. The target position is indicated by a light on the screen. The subject is also instructed to exert a force on the hand. The force is measured by a force sensor. The force sensor is connected to the computer. The computer records the force exerted by the hand. The subject is instructed to move the hand from the starting position to the target position while exerting a force on the hand. The force exerted by the hand is measured by the force sensor.
